Brings Prediction

Johnson Goes To New York

NEW YORK (AP) — President Johnson paid a brief visit to New York on Satday, bringing with him a prediction that Congress will pass the "strongest civil rights bill in American history."

Moving about Manhattan's West Side garment center, Johnson received a warm and enthusiastic welcome in the streets and in formal appearances before members of the AFL-CIO International Ladies Garment Union.

In his main address at a union rally, Johnson said a civil rights bill will not in itself insure racial justice.

"Now is the time to look beyond that bill — to struggle to eliminate the heavy weight of discrimination in the hearts and homes of people — to give to members of minorities the training, the education, the housing which will enable them to pass through the doors of opportunity," he said.

The President emphasized that he expects rapid progress in civil rights, as well as medical care for the aged, minimum wage legislation and antipoverty proposals.

"I predict," he said, "that in the next 10 years we will make greater gains toward this goal—toward justice and social progress—than at any time in the long history of our Republic."

Johnson's visit, billed as nonpolitical, was occasioned by the 50th anniversary of the ILGWU's health center at 25th Street and Seventh Avenue. It was there he headed first after his 12:25 p.m. arrival at Kennedy Airport on a flight from Washington.

Johnson was met at the health center by ILGWU President David Dubinsky and escorted to a 22nd-floor room where 200 invited guests awaited the President.

There Johnson shook more hands, then unveiled a plaque, commemorating the anniversary of the union's health center.

Senate Puts Off Showdown

On Halting Rights Bill Filibuster By Southerners

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Saturday postponed for a day its showdown on halting a Southern filibuster against the civil rights bill. In doing so, leaders apparently strengthened their chance for winning a stop-the-talk order.

By unanimous consent, the chamber agreed to vote Tuesday on three Republican-sponsored amendments to the House-passed civil rights bill which has been under Senate debate for 72 sessions.

To make way for these votes, the Democratic majority leader, Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana, postponed from Saturday until Monday the introduction of a petition to invoke the Senate's seldom-used debate-limitation rule—known as cloture.

This means the showdown will come Wednesday, instead of Tuesday, on this motion which would limit each senator to a one hour's talk on all amendments and the bill itself. This requires a two-thirds majority, presumably 66, since one of the 100 members, Sen. Clair Engle, D-Calif., is ailing and unlikely to vote.

Since it's unlikely each of the 100 members would avail himself of his full time, adoption of cloture probably would mean a decision by or before June 20 on the measure which the House approved Feb. 10 on a 290-130 vote and which was offered in the Senate March 9.

Under the agreement for preliminary voting accepted in a short session Saturday, four hours of debate will be permitted on each of the three amendments.

To be taken up first Monday will be one by Sen. Thruston B. Morton, R-Ky., to make jury trials mandatory in all criminal contempt of court actions growing out of the bill, except those involving voting rights. Morton offered this earlier and it was defeated 46-45.

Renegade Storm Hits Jacksonville

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A renegade storm roared through Jacksonville, Fla., Saturday, whipping parts of the city with 75 to 100 miles an hour winds, disrupting power, overturning cars, unroofing houses and swamping streets with torrential hail and rain.

Police were deluged with reports of accidents. All emergency units converged on the West Side of Jacksonville, but several police cruisers were flooded en route.

No serious injuries were reported.

The storm was apparently created by a tropical depression that developed earlier in the week in the Gulf of Mexico and pushed toward the Florida Coast late Saturday.

Jacksonville had not been included in the tornado warnings which were issued earlier Saturday for parts of northern Florida.

The Southeast was swamped with heavy rains throughout the day.

Downpours doused Tallahassee, Fla., with 3½ inches of rain and Birmingham, Ala., with 3¼ inches.

The Weather Bureau reported a tornado ripped a roof from a filling station in Perry, Fla., 50 miles southwest of Tallahassee.

Showers fell from New York through the northern Ohio Valwey. Rain dampened northern Minnesota, northeastern North Dakota, the northern Rockies, and the northern and central stretches of the Pacific Coast.

The northeast warmed up after record cold forced temperatures below the freezing level in some areas.

Temperatures ranged down to 29 in Greenville, Maine, and to 30 in Montpelier, Vt., early in the day.

Korean President

Park Compared To Strong Man

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — When President Chung He Park took the oath of office six months ago, he pledged to stamp out corruption and never permit a dictatorship to return to South Korea.

Today Park, 46, finds himself compared to the toughest Latin-American strong man and government employes have been accused of openly accepting bribes.

Hardships often spawn corruption, and this bleak, barren peninsula nation has hardships.

When Park was sworn Dec. 17, after heading a military junta for three years, some of the most pressing problems facing South Korea's Third Republic were inflation, unemployment and lack of foreign exchange.

South Korea still faces the same problems, but Park has introduced some improvements to ease the burden of the nation's 30 million people.

He has brought in new industry, notably cement and fertilizer plants. But this was done by straining other sectors of the economy and forcing the people to live an austere life.

A government worker's average monthly salary runs about $24, or about half of what it takes for basic essentials.

Since 1945, the United States has pumped in about $3.6 billion in economic aid. This flow of help hardly slowed during the Korean War, or during the political crisis that forced President Syngman Rhee to resign and a bloodless coup that ousted Premier John M. Chang and brought Park into power.

South Korea virually floats on U. S. aid. Park realized this when he assumed control of the country after the 1961 coup. He introduced an ambitious five-year industrialization plan in 1962 to increase the nation's growth rate by an average of 7 per cent annually.

The plan fell far short of its goals the first two years, and it was readjusted to return an average annual growth rate of 5 per cent.

Koreans had to tighten their belts. This created discontent and they began looking for a target for their criticism.

To Continue Civil Defense Agency Here

Judges of the Pettis County Court and the City Council decided Saturday morning to continue a joint Civil Defense agency for the city and county, but reduced the operation to a part-time basis.

Named as new director of the Sedalia-Pettis County agency was Russell R. Conn, Jr., 1318 South Quincy, formerly deputy director of the agency under Jack Kraus, who resigned June 1.

On the part-time basis Conn will receive a salary of $100 per month plus a mileage allowance of 10 cents per mile up to a $40 per month mileage limit.

The agency's only other paid employee will be a secretary—also on a part-time basis at a salary of $100 per month. Currently holding the position is Betty Upton.

"It was a majority decision 8-2 to proceed on a part-time basis," said Presiding Judge C. Berry Elliott, who announced the decision following the session in the County Court room. Six city councilmen, Mayor L. L. Studer, Judge Elliott and Judges E. L. Birdsong and C. M. Purchase constituted the 10 votes cast.

The group first balloted on whether or not to continue the agency and an 8-2 vote favored continuance. The part-time decision and salaries were then agreed upon.

Assuming Director Conn's travel will require the full $40 each month his salary and mileage will total $1,680 per annum while the secretary will draw $1,200 representing a total $2,880 outlay for salaries. Before the resignation of Kraus he drew $4,800 per year on a full-time basis and the secretary's job was on a full schedule.

Civil Defense expenses will continue to be split 50-50 by the city and county treasuries, but federal matching funds will not be available to the part-time agency as they were for the full-time schedule.

"Without matching funds we'll still be saving about $1,800 a year," Judge Birdsong commented.

With the part-time operation the CD agency is back to the way it was managed prior to the hiring of Kraus, who was the first full-time director.

The agency has operated on unassured local funds every six months as city and county budget appropriations came up. Most serious snag for Civil Defnese came early this year when Kraus proposed a county budget of $6,618.50 representing about an $1,800 increase over the previous year's budget.

The County Court at that time allotted $2,000 and told Kraus to phase out operations by April 1. A later decision by the city and county continued the agency to June 1 with both governmental units appropriating $200 per month up to that date.

Sweet Springs Man Is Shot While Hunting

Horace Edgar Reno, 52, who resided about seven miles north of Sweet Springs, was found dead by his wife Saturday morning who went to look for him when he did not return from hunting. He had left home about 5:30 a.m. to go hunting, and at about 10 a.m. when he failed to return Mrs. Reno felt something was wrong and found him where he had apparently caught the trigger of his gun while climbing a fence, the discharge of a .410 shotgun had gone into his head.

Saline County Deputy Walter Wade was summoned and he called the coroner, Dr. J. H. Martin, who pronounced it an accidental death, stating Reno had been dead about five hours.

Surviving are his wife of the home; four sons, Fred, Jim and Thomas, of the home, and Joe, who is in service in Viet Nam: and one daughter, Mrs. Loraine Williams, Sweet Springs.

The body is at the Miller Funeral Home in Sweet Springs.

Miss Ellen Woolery Second In Contest

Miss Mary Helen Gross won first place in the convention's statewide posture poster contest.

Scranton Aide Says 'He Is Available'

GOP Politicking Swings Toward Naming Scranton

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Republican presidential politicking deluged opening phases of the Nation Governors Conference on Saturday and produced a belated drive to swing the nomination to Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania.

A Scranton aide said: "He is available."

But the hard political facts were that Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona still held the inside of the track and was far in front of the pack in what was left of the race for the party nomination.

Still, former President Dwight D. Eisenhower called Scranton to his side in Gettysburg, Pa., and apparently gave him a measure of encouragement to cast himself more solidly into Goldwater's path.

Both Scranton and Eisenhower are coming to this 56th annual conference of the nation's governors. Goldwater and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon on Saturday accepted invitations to attend.

Govs. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York and George W. Romney of Michigan will be here, too.

So all the outstanding past and present possibilities for the Republican presidential nomination are going to be clustered together in one spot and perhaps in one room by next Tuesday.

In addition, Republican National Chairman William E. Miller will be on hand, along with Sen. Thruston B. Morton of Kentucky, who will be chairman of the Republican National Convention, and Gov. Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon, who will give the keynote speech at the convention in San Francisco next month.

On the Democratic side, President Johnson declined to deliver the main address of the conference Tuesday night, but National Chairman John M. Bailey will be around as usual, and former White House press secretary Pierre Salinger is coming in his new capacity as Democratic nominee for a U. S. Senate seat from California.

All in all, a conference which supposedly shuns politics and partisanship took on an ura of partisan politics such as it seldom has seen before.

Word was circulating that Scranton has concluded that his party would be injured beyond recovery should it nominate Goldwater and that the governor at last is willing to fight the senator for the nomination.

At his office in Harrisburg, Scranton was offering a "no comment" to such reports—not a denial. This was in contrast with his saying last week he would have no part of a stop-Goldwater move.

Harmony Reached In Strike

Violence Brought Out Troops In 99-Day Dispute

LANSING, Mich. (AP)—In their fourth night-long bargaining session since strike violence brought out more than 800 troops nine days ago, negotiators reached agreement Saturday in the 99-day Essex Wire Corp. strike at Hillsdale.

Gov. George W. Romney pressed the chiefs of Essex Wire and the striking International Union of Electrical Workers in to staying closeted in his office until terms of a four-year contract were worked out.

IUE Local 810 members, who struck Feb. 28 to win a first contract at Essex, will vote Sunday on ratification.

Pending their meeting, few details of the settlement were made public.

Romney said, however, one provision was that Essex began limiting employment Saturday night "to regular employes in the employ of the company before the strike commenced." This had been reported one of the prime issues, and Romney said Essex will employ IUE men "until all such employes have been recalled for work."

Will the AFL-CIO-affiliated union ratify the settlement?

"It is unthinkable that any of the parties concerned now would take a position contrary to the agreement reached here," Romney said.

Romney, beaming, announced the settlement with Essex President Walter Probst and IUE National President James Carey was summoned from Washington by Romney to join the talks Friday night.

In Hillsdale, Ted Nolan, IUE International representative, revealed the contract agreement has a four-year term. The union had sought a two-to-three year term, he said. While he did not reveal other details, he called the proposed pact "apparently good" because of the four-year clause.

The 35,000 Hillsdale county residents for the first time in nine days were freed from heavy National Guard controls.

Man Killed When Tractor Overturns

Guy Tucker, 65, of the Downing Bend Community, ten miles northwest of Warsaw, was fatally injured about 1:30 p. m. Saturday when the tractor he was operating overturned and pinned him to the ground. Benton County Coroner John Reser stated that death was accidental.

According to reports, Tucker was pulling a homemade blade unit and was working on his road when the accident occurred. Mrs. Sarah Pinkerton witnessed the accident and began screaming for help. His wife, Mrs. Ruby Tucker and a sister, Mrs. Anna Lee Queen, were fishing at the time and upon hearing the calls they returned home and found Tucker.

He was not freed until 5 p. m. when the Eaton Wrecker of Warsaw successfully set the tractor upright.

He was born in Fristoe, July 7, 1898, son of the late Elisha and Nancy Sally Tucker.

Mr. Tucker had resided in the Kansas City area for about 39 years until his retirement as a cement finisher, Jan. 1, 1964, when he returned to his home in the Downing Bend community.

He is survived by his wife, Ruby of the home; a brother, Harry Tucker, Warsaw; two sisters, Mrs. Elsie Taylor, state of California, and Mrs. Esther Prentice, Kansas City.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday at the Reser Funeral Home in Warsaw. The Rev. E. O. Farier will officiate.

Burial will be in the Riverside Cemetery. The body is at the Reser Funeral Home in Warsaw.

Julian Bagby Chosen To Attend National Democratic Meeting

A Sedalian, Julian H. Bagby, 1413 West Broadway, was chosen Friday as a delegate to the National Democratic Convention to be held in Atlantic City. Bagby was among 26 delegates from Missouri chosen to go to the convention.

Former President Harry S. Truman, Independence, Gov. John M. Dalton, and Sens. Stuart Symington and Edward V. Long were at the top of the list because of their positions in the party.

St. Louis City and County got ten of the delegates; Kansas City got five and the other seven went to outstate party members.

Former state chairman John Inglish, California, was chosen as an alternate.

Royal Couple Uninjured In Car Accident

LONDON (AP) — An automobile driven by Prince Philip with Queen Elizabeth II as a passenger collided with another at Maidenhead in Berkshire on Saturday night. The queen and her husband escaped injury, but the driver of the other car was injured slightly.

The injured man was identified as William Henry Cooper, who lives at the White Hart trailer camp at Holyport, near Maidenhead.

Maidenhead is a Thames riverside town about six miles from Windsor Castle, where the royal family is now staying.

Prince Philip often drives the queen on private trips. The queen drives, too, but only on the royal estates at Windsor and Balmoral in Scotland.

LBJ May Be Present For Kaysinger Start

President Lyndon Johnson has been invited to turn the first spadeful of dirt to officially start work on the $134-million Kaysinger Dam project in Benton County. The date will be announced later.

In reply to the invitation extended recently in the Cabinet Room of the White House, by Judge Haysler A. Poague, Clinton, chairman of Missouri Water Resources Board, Johnson said, "This sounds good, and I will make every effort to be there."

Johnson has sent a bill for $1,500,000 to appropriation committees of the House and Senate for construction start.

Clinton Resident Is Killed In Accident

William Lee Smith, 37, 612 South Main, Clinton, was killed early Saturday morning when his pickup truck went off Highway 71 near Harrisonville and struck a creek embankment.

The State Highway Patrol said the mishap occurred a half-mile west of Harrisonville at 4:45 a.m. and reported Smith was southbound in a 1961 Chevrolet pickup truck.

The truck left the highway on the wrong side before crashing into the embankment and the patrol said their investigation indicated Smith had fallen asleep at the wheel.

Want Statewide Combat

Rabies Arousing Concern

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Rabies, the virus that drives dogs mad, is causing increasing concern for several state officials.

They want authority to combat it on a statewide basis.

Missouri's agriculture department had the authority briefly from 1953 to 1955. Then by law, the power to issue a quarantine order reverted to the county courts and, in the view of the state veterinarian, Dr. L. A. Rosner, the campaign against rabies has suffered.

He said except in a few bootheel counties of southeastern Missouri, county courts have been reluctant to arouse the public by establishing a guarantine, forcing owners to vaccinate their dogs and keep them penned up for a month or two.

Dr. Rosner speaks with more than the usual authority on the rabies problem. Three times he has taken the Pasteur treatment after exposure to rabies. That's 21 painful shots in a series each time.

Two of the three times, Dr. Rosner said, he was suffering from undulant fever—the human version of bang's disease or brucellosis — and he blames the combination for a constant muscular twitch he suffers now.

Besides, Dr. Edmund R. Price said, more people have been killed by the treatment than from the disease. Dr. Price is consultant in veterinary medicine for the state Division of Health.

He figured that if 100 persons were exposed to rabies, between seven and 13 would actually contract the disease. Now there is a less painfull system of immunizing against rabies in human beings.

Dr. Price said those who work with animals a good deal—veterinarians, wildlife specialists and so on—can find out ahead of time whether they have a natural immunity.

Through the division of health they can sent a blood sample to the Public Health Service laboratories in Atlanta, Ga. If they have no natural immunity they can take a series of three immunization shots which have a high protective rating.

The division keeps an index of those who have been tested or immunized. Then when they may be bitten, the division can tell the attending physician immediately whether further treatment is indicated.

Two problems concern the experts the most.

One is that bats can contract the disease and live for a long time, infecting other warm-blooded animals. Dr. Price said bats have been known to live with rabies for as long as three months.

Dr. Rosner said normally dogs die within 10 days from rabies, but he recalled at least one case in which an infected dog lived for a little over a month. If he had not been isolated that dog could have infected a lot of other animals or human beings in that time.

The other is the so-called weak-heartedness of some dog owners. When a female dog has unwanted pups the owner just can't destroy them. Instead he takes them far from home and dumps them on someone else. They tend to pack up with other homeless dogs and then when one contracts rabies they have a big source of infection for other animals in the area.

Pinpoint Death Camp Murderer

By LOYAL GOULD

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP)—Five months of grim testimony have pinpointed Wilheim Boger as the main defendant in the long Auschwitz death camp trial.

Witness after witness singles out Boger as the most sadistic of the 21 former SS guards and functionaries accused of participating in the murder of more than four million Auschwitz inmates.

Their minute descriptions of the 58-year-old ex-SS sergeant and Gestapo agent killing adult and child inmates by hanging, beating, kicking, starving, suffocating, shooting and gassing frequently leave presiding Judge Hans Hofmeyer pale faced and gasping in horror.

Tears trickle down Hofmeyer's cheeks when witnesses describe what they call the "Boger swing" and what the defendant still terms "my talking machine"—a torture apparatus to which inmates were bound and then beaten with such force on their genitals that the victim swung back and forth.

Boger listens intently. He rarely shows any emotion. Sometimes he sneers and smirks, especially when one of his former victims breaks down and weeps on seeing him again after nearly 20 years.

Now and then Boger jumps to his feet, jerks his full six feet two inches to rigid attention and screams that the witness is lying.

He once advised Hofmeyer there would be far less juvenile delinquency if his "swing" were used on contemporary German youth "since beating never hurt anyone."

What kind of a person is Boger, the man said to have frequently compared Jews and Slavs to "lice that must be stamped out?"

A former SS colleague in Auschwitz testified that he was an ideal family man—"a father who spent his free time with his wife and children inseatd of joining his comrades in the camp's club for sergeants."

He is said to have taken great care that his three daughters were reared in the strict Lutheran faith of their parents—"that they all joined hands with their parents in prayer to give thanks for their blessings before every meal."

The vine-covered bungalow inhabited by the Boger family just outside Auschwitz' main gates was equipped with unpainted wooden furniture issued by the SS quartermaster.

In contrast to this were Boger's interrogation quarters inside the camp. Former inmates say he furnished them lavishly with rich oriental rugs stolen from wealthy French Jews.

Known at Auschwitz for his spit and polish, Boger shows up at every trial session in a neatly pressed dark suit with a freshly laundered white handkerchief in his breast pocket. He admits that a normal day's work in Auschwitz left him "in a bit of a mess".

Witnesses say he dripped with the blood of his victims which he washed off with a brisk shower before slipping into a freshly laundered and pressed uniform for the evening's reunion with his family.

Acquaintances of Mrs. Boger report she readily admits Auschwitz was no holiday center, but insists her husband is "too kind hearted" to have ever taken pride—as is charged—in his former title "the torture master of Auschwitz".

As an example of his kindness, she is reported to have pointed out that he was not at all angry on learning in pre-trial confinement that his oldest daughter had given birth to an illegitimate child fathered by a Sicilian laborer.

Boger gave his blessings to his grandchild, but forbade his daughter to marry the Sicilian as marriage with an Italian "would be a national disgrace."

"As a well brought up German girl, she followed his desires," said the acquaintance.

Boger claims that he merely followed orders in Auschwitz and only reverted to what he calls "sharper methods" when inmates refused to obey his orders.

He insists this was the case when he was "forced to take action" against inmates during the Auschwitz death march to Austria after the camp was partially evacuated in January 1945.

Survivors of the death march testify that he daily shot hundreds of half starved prisoners who collapsed from exhaustion.

Records of the court show that Boger, son of a Stuttgart drunk, managed to complete about 11 years of school before becoming an apprentice salesman with a hometown firm. A brother, whom Boger refers to as "the black sheep of the family", was a procurer and petty thief who disappeared sometime during the Third Reich.

In 1922 at the age of 16, Boger joined a Nazi youth organization in the fledging years of the Hitler movement. Eight years later, he became a member of the SS Elite Guard.

He frequently boasts to the court that he is "an old fighter," Nazi terminology for one who joined Hitler when he was still struggling for recognition.

With the Nazis in power in 1933, Boger became a Gestapo detective and, the prosecution says, delivered the first proof that he was a master of third-degree interrogation methods.

In 1941, he donned his SS uniform to join German forces marching on the Soviet Union. After nearly a year of fighting, he was wounded and sent to the Gestapo unit in Auschwitz.

After the war, he escaped an American prisoner of war camp and returned to Stuttgart where he joined under his own name a business firm as an office worker.

Acquaintances say he devoted the postwar years to his job, family and television viewing.

"He lived a typical middle class German life—sober, industrious and adhering to all the outward bourgeois virtues," a member of the prosecutor's staff said.

Asks Police Dogs for City Police Dept.

Maj. Gen. John C. "Jack" McLaughlin (Ret'd) called on Sedalia's civic clubs Friday to support an effort to obtain police dogs for the city police department.

"The city needs dogs to supplement the police force and there is nothing in the budget to provide for them," McLaughlin said. "I think it would be a very good project for the civic clubs to back."

McLaughlin outlined a plan to obtain two dogs at first, one for use on day patrol and one for night duty. Cost of obtaining the dogs would necessarily include training of a handler for the animals as police dogs work effectively for only one man.

McLaughlin was recently appointed as a member of the bipartisan Police Personnel Board.

The Civic Club Council voted to raise present signs at the four major routes into Sedalia to accommodate the shields of three other civic organizations.

Present signs located on Highway 50 and 65 approaches include Rotary, Lions, Kiwanis, Optimist and Business and Professional Women shields. The entire sign will be elevated sufficient to add shields for the American Business Women, Sedalia Jaycees and Altrusa.

Governor's Image Aired By Hearnes

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP)—Secy. of State Warren E. Hearnes said Saturday night he wants to be a governor reflecting "an image of stature based on experience, ability, wisdom, maturity and the knowledge that we are all children of God."

Hearnes, who is seeking the Democratic nomination, discussed the images of the state and its governor in a speech prepared for a Boone County Hearnes dinner.

"Stature based on pettiness, on the one hand," he said, "or on the gentility of age on the other, is a false image, easily eroded or removed quickly by time itself.

"As for myself this is the image I hope I will reflect. I want to build for you a state government supple and pliable, strong enough to withstand the tide of events which would destroy this golden age in which we live, in which we want our children to live tomorrow."

Hearnes named no one but his reference to "stature"' picked up a word used in the billboard campaign of the leading Republican candidate for governor, Ethan Shepley.

Hearns, a political foe of Gov. John M. Dalton, also made an obvious reference to recent criticism of Dalton many southeastern Missouri appointments. Hearnes is from the same bootheel area but he said:

"No governor though eternally indebted to those who worked long and hard for his election can make his government a 'kitchen cabinet' of political cronies. We cannot return to a spoils system of government by golf partners, friendly elbow rubbers or fellow board members.

"No section of our state, no Christmas card list of friends have all the strength and wisdom which Missouri needs to man the turbulent 60s which are with us."

At Democratic speeches the last two days Dalton has drawn laughs by addressing his audience as "cronies."

If elected, Hearnes pledged he would never obligate himself to anyone except to provide "government for the people."

MOSCOW (AP)—Official Soviet sources said today Premier Khrushchev will meet President Tito of Yugoslavia "in the next two days."

The sources said the meeting place probably will be Leningrad.

Tito is on an official visit to Finland.

The Soviet-Chinese power struggle — and the role Yugoslavia plays in it—is expected to be a top item on the Leningrad agenda.

Plans For Year

Install New BPW Officers In An Inspiring Ceremony

The new officers of the Business and Professional Women's Club, Mrs. Lily Thomas, president; Mrs. Nyra Price, president-elect; Mrs. Virginia Gilpin, vice - president; Mrs. Mary Whiteside, secretary; Mrs. Vivian E. Warren, treasurer; Capt. Marjorie Weber, past president-director; Miss Margaret Ferguson, auditor; Miss Bessie Perkins, chaplain; Mrs. Mildred Bowman, custodian; Mrs. Mary Gardner, historian; Mrs. Frieda Nelson, parliamentarian; Miss Hazel Palmer, honorary board member; Mrs. Frieda Nelson, life-time board member, were installed Thursday night at Bothwell Hotel.

The installing officer was Mrs. Marguerite Scott, who used candles in a very inspiring ceremony as she explained the duties of each office.

High tribute was paid to Captain Marjorie Weber, who as president - elect became president shortly after the year began when Mrs. Sue Keim, the president, left Sedalia.

Captain Weber told the group that it had been a privilege to be their president and stressed "It is a privilege." She went on to say that Sue Keim had used the wheel as she was installed as president at the beginning of the year and had pointed out that it was necessary for all parts of the wheel to function and all did function, said Capt. Weber. This year is now history, she continued, we have a responsibility, not only to the club but to the community and we are out to do something in the year ahead.

She pinned the president's pin on Mrs. Thomas who told of her plans for the year and introduced her committee chairmen: Mrs. Mary Kay Hunter, program chairman; Mrs. Virginia Gilpin, finance; Miss Erna Ann McClure, scholarship; Mrs. Mary Harlen, public relations; Miss Sue Heckart, civic participation; Mrs. Marguerite Scott, legislation; Mrs. Lou Scotten, world affairs; Mrs. Nyra Price, membership; Mrs. Doris Cavaness, music; Miss Edna Mae Kirchhofer, telephone; Mrs. Bertha Welch, special project; Mrs. Lilla Deal, hospitality; Mrs. Evelyn Staples, bulletin editor; Miss Marion Laudenberger, personal development; Mrs. Marie McClure, social; Mrs. Marjorie Garansson, state vice-president.

Mrs. Thomas then pinned the past president's pin on Capt. Weber.

Mrs. Evelyn Staples, chairman of the personal development presented the program.

Sedalia's young magician, Stephen White, assisted by his sister, Lisa, presented a clever act of magic with a moment of suspense when he appeared to be running a sword through the neck of Mrs. Vivian Warren who had volunteered.

The special music was by Mrs. James Richardson, who sang "The Blue Bird of Happiness" and a tribute to the new president, Lily Thomas, "The Golden Key" which is the BPWC song. She was accompanied by Mrs. George Lovercamp.

The program was given by four members of the organization who gave humorous incidents, as well as a bit of the serious side of their jobs.

The first speaker was Mrs. Bernice McGee, manager of Scott's Store, who has been with the company 26 years, and has been manager since 1958.

One of the funniest things that she could recall was when a man came in and asked if they had eye glasses. She told him that they did and they had them from eight to 32. He tried them all on and couldn't find any to suit him. He went out, came in another door and this time he asked her if she had any spectacles. She told him she did, took him to the same place, he started trying them on and bought a pair.

In her work, she said, the important thing is to give the customer good attention, smile and always say thank you. Customers like quick efficient service and sales people need proper training. A girl can increase her sales about 30 per cent if she makes suggestions. Some items move fast, she said, while others are slow. Keep stocked in the ones that go fast, she said, and have sales for those that go slow.

The next speaker was Mrs. Madeline Burke, who retired this year as a teacher. You laugh with children, she said, never at them. You take ticks out of their hair and their ears, you pull loose teeth and wrap them up so the child can take it home to dream on, and listen to the things they have to tell you.

Her worst experience, she said, was when there was a knock on the rural school house door when she first started teaching and a man in the neighborhood wanted her to come right away, his wife was having a baby. She left an eighth grader in charge of the school, went with the man, and had no idea what good she would be because she didn't know a thing about such situations. The doctor got there about the time they did, and he handed the new born babe to her and told her to take care of it — which she didn't know how to do either and she was scared she would drop it or break it — but she finally got it taken care of.

Miss Opal O'Briant stated she had been here ten years, and has the title of University of Missouri extension home economist, and she was glad they had changed it from county home agent. People kept getting her line of work mixed up. Someone called her one time and wanted to get her to do something about their pension. When she told them she had nothing to do with pensions, they said: "Aren't you the gal that runs the County Home." Another time she was called and asked: "Are you the do lady?" When she told them she didn't know what they meant they said, "I mean, are you the one who tells people how to do things."

Miss O'Briant stated there are 23 extension club, 31 4-H clubs, the Young Homemakers group; special interest group, newspaper column, and radio broadcasts, and she is kept busy.

Mrs. Frieda Nelson said the most important things that had happened in her life was when she said the Germans had a right to worship God in their own language; being appointed the first woman ranger and attending the Business and Professional Women's International convention in Vienna, Austria.

She told of the organization of the local BPWC and some of the community things accomplished in the early years, as well as some of the humorous things.

Invocation was by Mrs. Dorothy Huddleston, chaplain, and Miss Blanch Faust led the pep singing.

Mrs. Lily Thomas and Mrs. Marjorie Garansson were elected as delegates to the national convention with Mrs. Vivian Warren and Mrs. Marguerite Scott as alternates.

Mrs. Vivian Warren introduced the guests, LaVern McNabb, guest of Maria Walkup; Fern Barlish, guest of Lilla Deal and Mrs. C. B. Harris, guest of Jessie Goist.

Metro Squad Working On New Murder Leads

PLATTE CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Metro Squad working on the Biscoe murder case said Saturday it was checking on "important new information."

Marion Beeler, Raytown chief of police in charge of the squad's activities here, declined to give details but said the information is "one of the most important leads we have had to date."

The Metro Squad, composed of officers from various police organizations in the area, has been working almost continuously since April 29 on the case in which Mrs. Hattie Biscoe, 83, and her daughter Mrs. Marion Biscoe, 67, both of Camden Point, Mo., were killed.

Moonmen May Land Ahead Of Schedule

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Two astronauts may land on the moon 18 months ahead of schedule.

This announcement was made Friday by Dr. Joseph Shea, who directs the moon program for the Manned Spacecraft Center.

Shea told about 100 delegates to the Texas Air Force Association convention that rockets and men could be ready for a manned moon flight by 1968.

Most other estimates of the moon shot date have been close to the end of the decade, the target set by the late President John F. Kennedy.

Minor injuries were suffered by Miss Nancy Davis, 17, 2610 Plaza, in a two-car accident on U. S. Highway 50 at Gasoline Alley about 4:15 p.m. Friday. Driver of the second vehicle, Henry Akeman, 47, 1008 Sue Lane, escaped injury.

Trooper Pete Stohr of the State Highway Patrol, reported Miss Davis was driving a 1963 Volkswagen and was headed west, and when a car attempted to pass the on coming Chevrolet of Akeman, she pulled off on the shoulder of the highway and in pulling back to the highway lost control and her car went across the highway and struck the Chevrolet.

Miss Davis suffered abrasions of both knees and complained of a head injury. She was taken to the Bothwell Hospital by her father, C. Oliver Davis, for an examination. Her injuries were not believed to be serious.

Park's wrecker towed the Volkswagen to Sedalia and Bacon's wrecker the Chevrolet.

She was a passenger in a 1961 Oldsmobile, driven south on Ohio by Paul A. Musslin, 26, 1109 East 11th. Also involved was a 1955 Chevrolet, driven west on Fourth and negotiating a right turn, by Ronald L. Fisher, 18, 605 North Quincy.

Damaged was the right front of the Musslin car and the left rear of the Fisher car.

Musslin received a police summons.

Callaway was the driver of a 1957 Chevrolet, driven south on Massachusetts. He was treated at Bothwell Hospital by Dr. C. Gordon Stauffacher and released.

Also involved in the collision was a 1955 Chevrolet, driven east on Broadway by Willie Morley, 56, Windsor. Morley received a police summons for careless and imprudent driving and is to appear in police court, June 9.

The State Highway Patrol reported a 1951 Plymouth, being driven west by Cecil Calvert, 82, Green Ridge, failed to negotiate a curve and struck an embankment.

Calvert, his wife, Mamie, 79, and another passenger were injured. Mr. Calvert was considered the most seriously hurt. He sustained a compound fracture of the right leg, abrasions and facial lacerations. His condition Saturday at Windsor Hospital was still guarded.

Mrs. Calvert received a fractured right ankle and abrasions to the face and legs.

A passenger in the Calvert car, Nellie Ream, 76, also of Green Ridge, had a fractured right ankle and numerous abrasions.

Both Mrs. Calvert and Mrs. Ream were listed in "fairly good" condition Saturday at the hospital.

Franklin P. Lindsey, 52, 1211 East Third, the driver of a 1954 Plymouth that reportedly struck a parked car at Fifth and Emmet about 5:58 p. m. Saturday received a laceration to the lower lip as a result of the accident.

He was treated at Bothwell Hospital by Dr. Karl Gonser and released.

The parked car, a 1958 Oldsmobile owned by Ernest G. Neffendorf, 1700 East 15th, was damaged in the rear end and the Lindsey car was damaged in the front end.

Lindsey received a police summons for careless and imprudent driving and is to appear in police court, June 8.

Also the petition requests that the court appoint a guardian for Lewellen, as he is not of age.

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I made up my mind if it happened one more time I would write to you. Well . . . it did. I received a birthday card from a friend, signed "Best wishes from Gertrude and Madame Du Barry." Madame Du Barry is her dog.

This woman always signs her dog's name on everything and I resent it. I don't want best wishes from a dog.

Every Christmas I receive about ten or twelve cards with pictures of dogs and cats who are sitting right there with the family. "Fido, Snowflake, King and Champ" are treated as if they were children. When we get a card from a certain friend, my husband says, "I didn't realize the Browns had five girls." I told him they didn't. He said, "You're wrong, here are their names . . . " Then suddenly he discovered Ruth and Mazie were a couple of Siamese cats.

Will you put something in your column and end, once and for all, this ridiculous practice?—DANDER UP.

Dear Dander: Many people consider their pets part of the family. It's amazing how many people who are perfectly well balanced in other respects go a little bit haywire when it comes to their pets. Accept it because you can't change it.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 16-year-old girl who moved to this rather large city from a small town in Nebraska.

I became friendly with two girls who are also high school sophomores. Last Saturday afternoon we three went to the movies together. I was quite surprised when these girls seemed a lot more interested in meet-fellows than in watching the picture. They started up conversations with different groups of boys. One of the girls accepted a ride home with a boy she never had seen before.

When I told the other girl that I thought this was cheap, she said I was crazy—that it's fun to get acquainted with kids from other schools, and that a theater movie is the best place to meet. She called me "small-townish" and said where I came from everybody knows each other, but in a large city it's the only way to make new friends.

Is she right?—NOT SURE.

Dear Not Sure: Girls who start conversations with boys they've never seen before put a cheap price-tag on their company. And it doesn't make any difference whether you live in Miami or Grand Island.

You need some girl friends whose ideas are more like the ones you brought from Nebraska.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been invited to a wedding. The daughter of a long-time friend is being married. We will be out of the city on the day of the wedding and will not be able to attend.

My husband insists that we are not obligated to send a gift since we will not be at the ceremony. It seems to me that the mannerly thing to do is send a gift regardless.

Will you please settle this? I am getting fed up arguing and we have gotten nowhere. Your word will be the last one.—DEAF ALREADY.

Dear Deaf: The invitation was sent because they wanted your presence — not your presents. Obviously they consider you friends.

A wedding gift is a token of friendship, not payment for what you eat or drink. Send a gift.

Confidential to Not Laughing: Nobody says you must laugh, but a sense of humor can be invaluable in such a situation. It can help you overlook the unattractive, tolerate the unpleasant, cope with the unexpected and smile through the unbearable.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Close Barber Shop Due To Race Dispute

YELLOW SPRINGS, Ohio (AP)—Lewis Gegner swore, "I'd close my barbershop before I integrated."

A "For Sale" sign was placed in the shop Friday.

"I will never cut hair in Ohio again," the 55-year-old barber murmered as an epitaph to a four-year civil rights dispute carried through the courts of the state and the streets of this southwestern Ohio village.

It was a quiet end to the 44 years in which Gegner and his father before him had cut the hair of the white men of Yellow Springs.

All that remains unfinished is an appeal before the Supreme Court of Ohio asking that Gegner be allowed to refuse service to Negroes, or, in effect, exempting barbers from the state's antidiscrimination law.

Gegner's court battles have been based on his contention that he doesn't know how to cut Negroes' hair.

But the portly barber is pessimistic about his chance in the high court. "The way this country is going, this civil rights thing, I don't think I have much chance of winning. Maybe other Ohio barbers will want to fight it, but I'm through. It's too expensive."

Actually, the two-chair shop has been closed since mid-March, following a weekend of near-rioting there. More than 100 students from three area colleges were arrested.

The village of Yellow Springs is the home of Antioch College, a highly-rated liberal arts college known for its progressive education. A few miles south are Central State and Wilberforce universities, predominantly Negro schools.

"I have no ill feelings toward any of those people," Gegner said. "I guess it's more or less like religion. They're entitled to theirs and I have mine."

Despite the events, Gegner said he has felt no strain on his relationship with the people of this village, his home since he was 11. His wife, Martha, is a native.

Even now, he does not want to leave town. "I'm looking for work elsewhere because there is nothing for me to do in a small place like this. But I'm not planning to move."

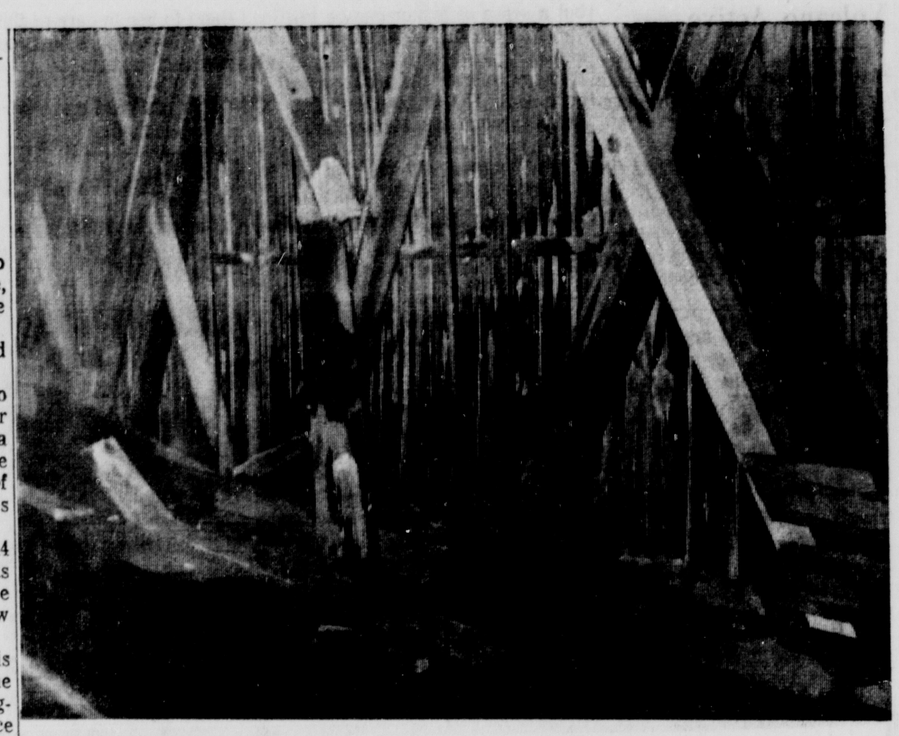
He said he has an offer from a real estate firm in Dayton. But Gegner said, "I'll have to wait to decide about it. I don't really know what I'm going to do. I've been a barber for 38 years."

Two Plead Innocent Of Mail Defraud

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Two men charged with using the mails to defraud pleaded innocent Friday and their trial was set for June 15.

They are H. Dean Hodges, 34, Springfield, Mo., and Jack Thornton Atkinson, 34, no address. They were originally indicted along with Alfred H. Osborne, former Kansas City lawyer, in the operation of the American Credit Co and the Global Advertising Co., both of Kansas City.

Osborne later was dropped as a defendant after he was sentenced to 15 years in prison for conspiracy to rob banks and for aiding and abetting in the hold-up of the Dearborn, Mo. bank.



COVERED BRIDGE DAMAGED — A large eight-by-eight bracing timber was snapped as shown in the above picture when struck by a motor vehicle reportedly driven by David Bronson, 40, of Jefferson City. Two side rails, two-by-six were broken and knocked off on the west side of the bridge where the large bracing timber was snapped and a two-by-six timber on the east side of the bridge broken from the impact. Damage was estimated at several hundred dollars, in material and labor to replace. (Democrat-Capital photo)

James Harms Elected As CMA President

James N. Harms, staff manager of the Prudential Life Insurance Company, was elected president of the Central Missouri Association of Life Underwriters at its monthly meeting at the Bothwell Hotel Friday.

James T. Denny, consultant for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, was selected the 1964 - 65 vice president, while George Meuschke, Marshall, will be the new secretary and treasurer. Kenneth Reese, district manager, Western & Southern Life Insurance Company, was elected national committeeman. David Eisenstein, general agent for Mutual of Omaha and United of Omaha, retiring president, had charge of the meeting.

Henry A. Keeler attorney-at-law, was the principal speaker at the meeting, using the subject, "The Industrial Revolution." Keeler graphically showed how the rapidly developing processes in this country will result in changes in sales techniques and markets. Although there will always be a need for the services of a life insurance salesman, he will find his former clientele in the "white collar" market gradually slipping away. This working class in America has moved into other classes because of the many machines which eliminates his jobs, Keeler pointed out.

Vacationing In Arctic Region

If you want a really different vacation, John Ryan and Frank Wagner can tell you about a brand new spot that has been open for vacationers just two years, this being the third year.

Of course, it is a little far off, way up almost to Coronation Gulf in the Northwest Territory, Canada, and after you get to Yellow Knife, in the district of McKenzie near Great Slave Lake, you run out of road and have to go the rest of the way by plane.

It was last year in the summer that George Harry of Stover called John and asked him if he would like to go on a fishing trip way up north.

"I don't care much for fishing," John says, "but I love to go places and I said I'd like to go."

George called Frank and, of course, he wanted to go, too, but Frank is a fisherman at heart, and he was interested in fish as well as the trip.

The trio got together with Mitz Pellock of Tennessee and Phil Brady of St. Joseph, and they set out with the adventuring spirit of pioneers, going up into the unknown region that was just a dot on the Canadian map—their own dot made with pencil, because there really isn't any dot there—not on the map in our Atlas anyway. In fact even John couldn't find the Tree River where they camped on our map.

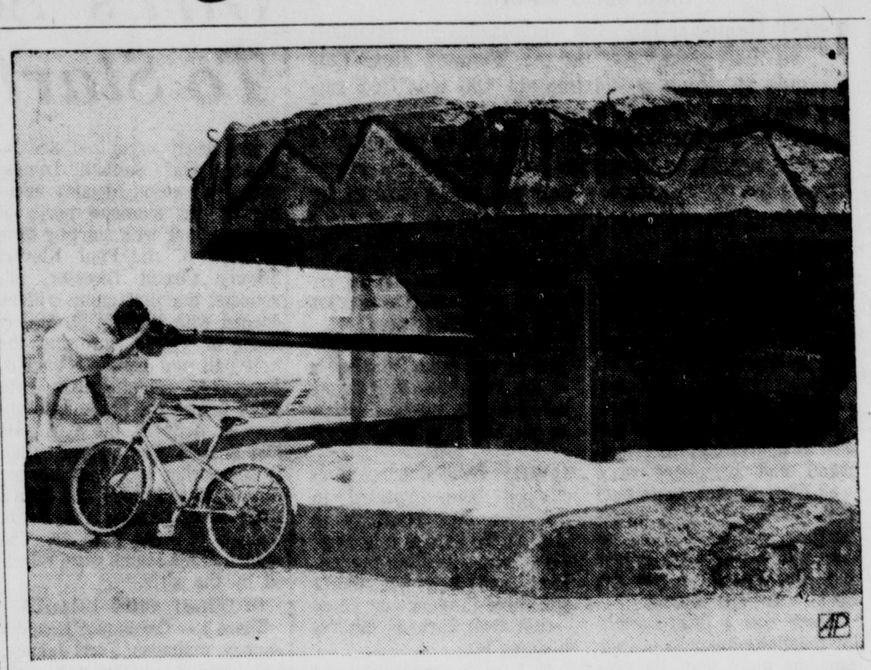
Piling an assortment of fishing equipment, clothes, a pyramid tent and a few other things together they thought they would need, they left Sedalia by car on Aug. 25, and drove the 2,703 miles to Yellow Knife in 73 hours. That, for most people, would be a real vacation trip in itself, but not for these rugged individuals who arrived at Edmundson, Canada, and from there took the only highway that led to Yellow Knife in Northwest Territory which is a mining town. Gold and other minerals are mined there and it got its name when Indians came in there with handles made of gold on their knives. This was a busy place and the group was a little curious about dirty looking men rushing around carrying expensive brief cases. They decided that they must be mine executives taking care of their business.

At Yellow Knife they took the Ward Air Limited, a twin motor Beechcraft, to Tree River Valley, which John described as very beautiful in an unique sense, with wooded vegetation, mostly of brushy willow not over waist high.

The party hired two Eskimos, Harry Ben, which in Eskimo is Joe Squirrel, and his son, Sam. With their two boats the Eskimos took the men and their equipment and went up to their camp on Tree River which was as far as they could go by boat.

They put the tent up and all five of them slept in it, but they found the weather up there as unpredictable as Missouri, but a lot colder for that time of year. The ordinary sleeping bags were not adequate and they do not hesitate to suggest to anyone going up in that region to see that they have the very warmest sleeping bags they can buy.

It wasn't bad enough that they were not exactly cozy warm in their sleeping bags in the tent but it rained, and somehow the rain came in where Frank was sleeping and got his sleeping bag wet.



NORMANDY REVISITED — French boy peers into muzzle of a gun in one of many bunkers erected by Germans to halt Allied invasion of Normandy. Bunkers, still in the town of Bernieres-Sur-Mer, now are much less menacing than on D-Day, June 6, 1944.

The next morning they decided to take a little six mile jaunt somewhere, so before they left Frank turned his sleeping bag inside out so it would dry out before night — but luck just wasn't with Frank. While they were gone it snowed, and when they returned the sleeping bag was covered with snow, and wetter than ever. The weather was very cold and they were all thoroughly uncomfortable.

Across the river on the other side a fellow named Bill Murphy, from Sioux Marrows, Ontario, operated a lodge, and realized the plight they were in. Of course, for a lot more money they could have taken the trip and stayed at the lodge — but they had preferred to go on their own and rough it. They hadn't counted on anything like they ran into and it was a little too rough.

But Bill Murphy was a good guy. He had a lodge, warm sleeping bags, things of real comfort, and no guests in his lodge for that night — so in a friendly, neighborly way he invited them over to spend the night with him.

Boy, was it ever wonderful. A nice warm lodge, and not just ordinary sleeping bags but those made for frigid weather.

The Eskimos they found very friendly. They had not known the party was coming because there are no communications, but they were there to meet them, and assisted them whenever they could.

It is a primitive life they live up in that country, the same way their people have lived for 1500 years. In the warmer weather they live in tents. The floor is but the ground, there was just beds two feet above the ground with the clothes folded at the head, and this included the winter furs. An oil drum was the stove, in which fuel used was seal or walrus oil. Their livelihood is by hunting and fishing and the Canadian Mounties come in by plane to bring them supplies for which they trade the furs and other things.

In the winter they travel from place to place in little groups. The men build igloos by digging a big hole in the ground, then making walls with ice and snow and covering it. The igloos, they told John, are evry warm.

When John told of his plans to go on the trip Forrest Drake offered him some boots that he got several years ago and didn't want because he never used them. Just before they were ready to leave the Eskimo Harry Ben said to him: "Harry needs boots."

"Why don't you buy some?" John asked.

But Harry explained that he couldn't get to where they sold them.

"How would you go," John wanted to know, "if you were going?"

"Dog sled," said Harry.

"How long would it take?"

"Thirty days," said Harry, and said he had never gone. Then he pointed to John's boots. "Harry need boots," he repeated.

John gave a price on them and Harry took him up—took out the money and paid him—so John came back without Forrest's boots.

They really are resourceful people, though, they found. One of the three or four modern things they do have is motor boats. Something went wrong with Harry's motor boat.

"What are you going to do?" one of the men asked.

"Harry fix," replied the Eskimo, and sure enough he did fix.

"How did you fix it, Harry?" they inquired, a little curious, and Harry explained that it was the bronze bushing on the gear case and he simply fixed it with nylon rope.

Frank proved that he was an expert fisherman because he caught a fish that they knew must equal if not exceed the record catch of 27 pounds. They hadn't expected the fish to be so big or something — anyway, the scales they had with them just weighed up to 17 pounds and this fish went far above that.

Exceedingly proud of his catch, Frank skinned it, gave the fish to the Eskimos, as they did all of the fish because they could not bring them home, but Frank was going to bring this skin home and have it stuffed so he could prove this fish story. The other fellows had a few skins, too, and when they got back to the Gold Range Hotel at Yellow Knife, they had the hotel man to put them in the deep freeze for them, because they were going to go the next morning to Great Slave Lake for another ten days fishing.

When they returned to the hotel somebody had thrown the skins out because they had a delivery of fresh meat and needed the space to put it. Anyway, they didn't think the fishermen were coming back.

If that wouldn't let the wind out of a fellow's sails, nothing would, and it practically ruined Frank's trip. After all nobody would believe that he practically broke the record and maybe did in catching fish up there. But his friends are right on the job saying they knew he did make that big catch because they saw it. They all caught big fish but his topped the catch.

Things were a little more comfortable on Great Slave Lake, for there they found two cabins for sport fishermen that had been abandoned. They fixed the cabins up real good and it was just like living in a palace after roughing it. They had beds, a table and a place to cook, and just about the best cook imaginable, George Harry, who insisted on doing the whole job himself — and none of the rest argued with him about it. He had completely balanced meals with always a nice salad. He even made raisin cake.

John proved he was a good fisherman, too. He knew all the techniques. He hooked Brady's reel and threw it out in the lake, and that cost him $48. Then another time he threw his own out when he was casting, and lost it.

"When you go on a fishing trip," John says, "be sure to take plenty of fishing equipment along — you never know how many rods and reels you are going to lose and you can't buy them.

They found lots of ducks there —you practically run into them with your motorboat, he said. The ducks and geese were getting ready to go south.

They caught 40 jack salmon and gave them to the Indians who dried them in the sun in the same manner that Eskimos did.

It was a real fishing trip because they caught lots of fish—they just couldn't bring them home to show.

The most beautiful thing on the trip was the northern lights, John said. He had seen them from here at times and thought they were pretty, but to see them up in the Tree River region was something different. It was like many brilliant rainbows dancing in the sky that was brightly lighted.

It was worth going up there to see, he said, but the time of year was getting late for that region—the Canadian Mounties had made their last trip there for the year and would not return until April, and the plane that was to take them home didn't come when it should. It was supposed to be there at 8 a.m. but wasn't at 9, 10 or 11. It looked like they might be there another night—maybe the plane wouldn't come at all—it was a rather sickening feeling—and then, suddenly in the sky it appeared. If they thought he wasn't going to come back they were just far off—after all, they hadn't paid the pilot for bringing them—and they had a little misgivings in the first place—that was the reason.

But it is a great place—really great—even if they didn't want to stay.

Hearnes To Open Little League Season Tonight

This is National Little League Week, and thousands and thousands of youngsters are participating in this 25th Anniversary of Little League. Sedalia is observing its 13th Anniversary this year, and the local season is being opened today at the league park in the west portion of Liberty Park.

Warren E. Hearnes, Secretary of State, is coming to Sedalia this evening to participate in the ceremonies of the season opener. Secretary Hearnes, a Democratic candidate for Governor, announced he was coming to Sedalia for this program as a state official.

Kenny Melton, league president, announced this 1964 roster contains more than 600 names of Little Leaguers, all expected to be present for the opening and will be crowded on the ball diamond and outfield during the introduction of managers, coaches, league officials and others.

Introduction of Secretary Hearnes who will give a brief talk to the youngsters, followed by the warm up of the two starting teams, the Moose Club and the Elks, who will start play at 7:30 o'clock. Secretary Hearnes will "hurl" the first ball across the plate which will officially open the season.

Warren E. Hearnes

He is being accompanied to Sedalia by his daughters, "my non-Little League players," Secretary Hearnes referred to his daughters.

Much work has gone into the Major League park, with painting of the stadium and revamping of the baseball diamond, which is considered one of the finest of Little League parks in Missouri. This work has been under the supervision of Executive Vice-President Carl Walker, who also did a good portion of the redecorating of the stadium.

State Fair Horse Show Dates Set

The 1964 Missouri State Fair horse show will open this year on Saturday, Aug. 22 and run for eight days through Aug. 29.

According to E. F. Strickler, Sedalia, who is superintendent of the show, the 1963 event was one of only 15 five or more days show in the United States that was officially rated an honor by the American Horse Shows Association. The award which is highly coveted by all major horse shows, is the highest honor given by the association.

This year's show carries premium money of $21,400 and is divided into a class A show for roadsters, fine harness, walking horses, harness and hackney pony divisions, three gaited and five gaited saddle horses and the parade division; and four divisions which are class C. They are working hunters and jumpers, quarter horses and an Apaloosa division. There is also an equitation division for exhibitors under 18 years of age and a saddle club show which is held on Saturday, Aug. 29.

A number of specialty acts have been signed to provide nightly performances between judging events. Among there are the world famous Budweiser Clydesdale horses. The six-horse hitch made up of beautifully matched animals maneuver a 6,000 pound wagon in the show ring as though it were a toy, through a series of intricate movements.

Another of the feature attractions will be the Victor Comptometer Corp. six pony hitch. The matched shetlands perform precision maneuvers while pulling a miniature fire engine. It is a five-eights scale reproduction of an antique steam pumper in the Smithsonian Institution. Additional features are being planned for the show, according to Strickler.

Other officials of the show, in addition to Strickler, are Tuck Higgins, Houstonia, steward; Robert Reavis, LaMonte, stabling; Jasper (Jack) Corum, Liberty, ring master; Jack Atkinson, Fulton, announcer; Bill Utz, Sedalia, farrier; Mrs. A. P. Green, Odessa, trophies chairman; Mrs. Jack Atkinson, Fulton, official hostess. Judges are: Robert H. Lewis, Jr., San Mateo, Calif., for hackney and harness pony, parade horses, saddle horses, and saddle seat equitation. Benson R. Hedges, Phoenix, Ariz. for appaloosa, hunters, jumpers, western hunter seat equitation, stock seat equitation and saddle club; and R. C. Hughes, Jackson, Miss., for walking horses. Rosalind Gibson, Independence, will again perform on the organ and provide musical accompaniment for the show.

Entries for the department close July 30, and no post entries are allowed.

Northern Dancer Third

Quadrangle Wins Belmont Stakes

NEW YORK (AP) — Quadrangle, a strapping bay colt from Paul Mellon's Rokeby Stables, spoiled Northern Dancer's bid for the Triple Crown Saturday when he won the 96th running of the $154,600 Belmont Stakes by two lengths at Aqueduct.

Northern Dancer, winner of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, and the odds-on choice of the record Belmont Stakes crowd of 61,215, had to settle for third place as Roman Brother, the mighty mite from Louis Wolfson's Harbor View Farm came up for second place, four lengths in front of the Canadian-owned Dancer.

Hill Rise, second choice, was fourth in the field of eight 3-year-olds, half length back of Northern Dancer.

Manuel Ycaza sent Quadrangle over the grinding 1½-mile distance in 2:28 2-5 after racing close to the pace from the start. He earned $110,850, boosting his total winnings to $340,499. The Rokeby Stable colt, a son of Cohoes-Tap Day, by Bull Lea, had finished fifth in the Kentucky Derby and fourth in the Preakness before he came back a week ago for a powerful second against older horses in the Metropolitan Mile.

But Saturday was his day as he turned back the bid of Northern Dancer in a great stretch run.

The Dancer, seeking to become the ninth winner of the Triple Crown, couldn't even save second money for E. P. Taylor of Toronto. Roman Brother came up and left him lengths behind in the final sixteenth of a mile.

Bill Shoemaker, astride the Hill Rise from George A. Pope Jr.'s El Peco Ranch, lodged a claim of foul against Bill Hartack, up on Northern Dancer. Shoemaker claimed the Dancer came over on his horse rounding the final turn, but the stewards allowed the order of finish to stand. That placed Brave Lad fifth, Orientalist sixth, Determined Man seventh and Shook eighth.

Quadrangle, trained by Elliott Burch, paid $15.10 to win. Roman Brother, an 889-pound package of dynamite piloted by Fernando Alvarez, paid $8.10 to place. Northern Dancer, who went off the 4-5 choice, was $2.10 to show.

Hillcrest Lanes also has the honor of having had the Bantam Bowling Champions of the entire state in the same Mailograph Tournament. These youngsters will also be recognized at the presentation to the Seniors, Wednesday.

The Bantam boys have already received their trophies, this due to the fact that several youngsters had planned to be gone on vacation and a couple are sons of parents connected with the Minuteman Missile project and have left Sedalia.

In the recent national conventions, both the American Bowling Congress and the Women's International Bowling Congress voted unanimously to provide the American Junior Bowling Congress a new home. Thus, the two membership organizations have agreed to take on the joint financial and administrative responsibllities of the junior organization. Its office will be moved from Chicago to the ABC Headquarters in Milwaukee and administered under rules and policies determined by a joint WIBC-ABC committee.

National council leaders felt that sponsorship by ABC and WIBC would resolve many of AJBC's growth and services problems. It will provide direct junior membership services in every community in the same manner now provided adult bowlers.

In Wrestling Action

Bob Geigel Will Try To Bolster His Recognition

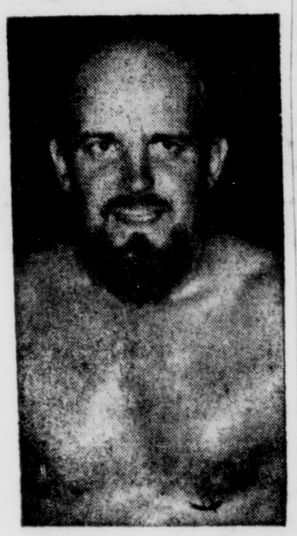
Bob Geigel's reputation as a wrestling spoiler has been known for a long time. The 233-pound balding Iowa battler will try to bolster that recognition when he collides with the giant Stomper here Tuesday night.

The two are pitted in the main event of a four-match ring program at Convention Hall.

The Stomper, a massive 270-pounder, has been a mainstay on the Missouri-Kansas wrestling scene all season. His power is well known and that is the reason Geigel figures he will have an even chance against the big fellow.

"I know his strong points and his weaknesses," he commented, "and I intend to take advantage of the latter while avoiding his key holds." Geigel has the speed to do both and also boasts decent power of his own.

Another rough event is expected in the team match when the towering Lawman and Lee Henning match force with cagey Tokyo Tom and Baron Von Strauss.



Baron Von Strauss

In separate pairings, Von Strauss will tackle the Lawman, Henning will go against the Japanese.

Coon Hound Magazine Nationwide

"People in Sedalia may not know there is a 'Full Cry' magazine published in their hometown," said Mrs. Estelle Walker, "but those living in Anderson, S. C., know all about it."

The editor of the magazine has returned home again from one of those big coon hound events loaded with gifts of all kinds, where she was given police escort, and was an honored guest at banquets and other functions.

There is always the red carpet for Mrs. Walker, who publishes Full Cry exclusively for the American Coon Hound and Trail Hound enthusiasts, when she goes to a coon hunting event and certainly Anderson, S. C. has one she never likes to miss.

This was the 1964 World's Championship Coon Hound Water Race, where the coon is put in a box or cage in the water and the dogs swim out to it, the first crossing the line being the winner — but, the coon doesn't get hurt because he and his cage are pulled up in the tree.

Along with coon hound water races is a country music festival. The whole community had a big time, and there was Estelle Walker right in the midst of it being photographed with the mayor and the Grand Ol' Opery stars, receiving the key to the city, a double serving tray, a radio, a gold pen and pencil set, a silver pitcher and even a big box with preserves and jam and with her name, the name of her magazine and Sedalia all over the town.

Mrs. Walker has been getting a great deal of publicity through her magazine which she took over a number of years ago at the death of her husband after he had just started publishing it, but she thought she had really gone places when her picture appeared in Billboard magazine last September, on the same page with Big Crosby and other notables.

Sports Scraps

(By D. KELLY SCRUTON)

LAST Memorial Day, the Sedalia Jaycees sponsored their own "500" at the Missouri State Fair grounds at which approximately 100 modified racing cars were present to participate in the various events. The event was very successful in attendance, I might say, and so were the events, with the exception of the "A" Feature which was taken care of by arguments among the drivers and "backed-up" by a downpour of rain.

No sir, it was no fault of the Jaycees the rain came and the event was delayed nearly 30 minutes because of the lengthy time trials — incidentally which was one of the big events for the fans. Proving the time trials are just as interesting, the grandstand and bleachers were well filled, in fact, more than half filled by those speed hungry persons wanting to see which car and driver was the fastest — not the best — but the fastest.

There was a little rumble by a definite minority of race fans, no more than six persons out of well over 7,500, who wanted a refund. I might say here that in case of a racing, sporting, or any other event where the program has been carried through more than 50 percent there is no such thing as a "rainout." The program is considered furnished to the satisfaction of the contestants and a great majority of the patronage.

The Sedalia Jaycees are not to be criticized for refusing to make any refunds. Actually the fans should be happy to be a part of an event which through the profits of this racing program, is helping to bolster a great many of Sedalia's youngsters. The money is being used to complete the Babe Ruth baseball park in Centennial Park, a part of Sedalia's park system.

As to canceling of the feature, this became necessary when the rains came, but possibly if some of the racing drivers hadn't gotten a little hot-headed over positions when two spinouts, one on the south curve and one on the north curve which created pile ups, and then a discussion and ruling on starting positions, maybe more laps might have been run. But the constant bickering among the drivers is blamed, from the way I see it, for the greater delay.

But we must also understand this bickering is only natural, as these boys are looking at the purse monies, and a move back to last place cuts a second place man out of $300 and a driver actually believing and feeling he should be in second spot, can see that $300 vanishing from his clutches. It is only natural they would be disturbed over a decision whereby a man was put in second spot, and then changed to the rear for the restart, and all through a misunderstanding.

There was nothing whatsoever dishonest in the rulings, nor was there any intention of trying to favor or disfavor any driver. This was proven by the action of the Jaycees Board of Directors this past week, when they voted to pay Bill Utz second place monies, and had already paid the second spot money to a visiting driver, who actually felt he was entitled to it due to the ruling.

Let's hear no complaining about the Jaycees and their project. It is an excellent one and we hope will be carried on each year. With this year's experience, I am sure the officials and everyone concerned have benefitted to the point, that the 1965 local "500" will be run with the utmost efficiency.

A "rain out" date for the feature alone was most impractical and would have been too costly in the first place, in the second place to rent the track and fairgrounds would have been prohibited, and in the third place many of the cars and drivers would not have returned for just the feature race.

So that "select" few might just as well get off the backs of the Jaycees — they did an excellent job anyway, whether you like it or not.

THE Sedalia Country Club golf team traveled to Jefferson City Thursday to play in the second rounds of the Inter-City Tournament. They had fun, but didn't get in but three or four holes —rain took care of the remaining 14.

The local golfers returned with "tall tales" about how they were willing to make the rounds, but those who know the members of the team realize it was mostly conversation. They like those from Fulton, Columbia and even the host team were more than willing to head for the club house, enjoy a good meal and make for home.

There is little doubt in the minds of some that Fulton, Sedalia and Jefferson City all are thinking they would have dethroned Columbia from the first place position. They gave little consideration that maybe Columbia might have added more points toward the championship.

Tuesday the teams gather together at Fulton where the scheduled third round turns into the second round and an announcement as to whether a reschedule of the Jefferson City competition will be made.

The Sedalians are in second position at the present time.

—o—

TWO Sedalia woman bowlers at least gained prize monies in the recent Women's International Bowling Congress tournament at Milwaukee, one from Hillcrest Lanes team and one from the Swafford Service team from Broadway Lanes.

Alice Morris of the Hillcrest team who hit a 560 is far up from the bottom money paying place of 517; while Lelia Norton of the Swafford Service team had a 538.

It was tough to learn the doubles cut the Sedalians short and they missed money placing by four pins by one and five pins by the other. The bottom prize paying place was 1,026. Carrie Ferguson and Lela Norton of the Swafford team scored a 1,023 while Donna Heembrock and Nan Newman missed it with their 1,021.

In the singles competition Edie Simon had a 507 and Kay Carter, a 503, both of the Swafford team barely missed the money bracket.

The local bowlers did bring home six 200-pin awards, when they bowled games 200 or better. They were Beth Delph with 221, Donna Heembrock had a 214, Lela Norton 204, while Nan Newman, Alice Morris and Carrie Ferguson all scored 201 games.

In team events, the low pay on monies for the tournament was 2,473, and the local teams turned in the following scores: Hillcrest Lanes 2,377; Broadway Lanes 2,408; and Swafford Service 2,241.

Better luck next year. You should have the shakes of an International Tournament out of your system now and should be calm, cool, and collected for the 1965 tournament to bowl bigger and better scores—not that the ones who had this year were so bad, just because you all didn't get in the money.

Mark Brady Is Lucky To Be Alive

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — About a month ago Mark Brady was an Olympic track hopeful. Today he's lucky to be alive.

The 23-year-old former University of Oklahoma high jumper, who had just completed work on his master's degree, was jumping higher than ever before. His thoughts naturally turned to the Olympics.

Brady was becoming fairly consistent at clearing around seven feet in practice.

Then disaster struck.

While warming up to compete in a meet at Nashville, Tenn., Brady suffered a cerebral hemorrhage. Brady complained of a numbness in his arm and prompt attention was credited with saving his life.

He was rushed to a hospital and lapsed into unconsciousness. It was almost a month before he was removed from the critical list.

His recovery has been amazing. From a state of almost total paralysis, Brady has recovered to the point he can walk with the aid of crutches. He was unable to speak, but now talks slowly but surely.

"He's gained just tremendously," said his mother, Mrs. Edgar Brady of Oklahoma City.

He was flown home from Nashville a week ago.

"He'll be under a doctor's care for some time," said Mrs. Brady.

He requires physical and speech therapy constantly.

"One doctor told us he might be fine by Christmas," Mrs. Brady said. "We're praying for that."

Brady's friends at the University of Oklahoma have helped out. When he was stricken, the university's O Club started a drive for funds to help defray medical expenses. The fund now contains more than $1,300 and contributions are still arriving.

It is estimated that only one automobile in every 10 is equipped with safety seat belts.

ST. PAUL - MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Steve Barber and Stu Miller combined for a five-hitter as the Baltimore Orioles nipped the Minnesota Twins 2-1 Saturday.

Miller came on in the eighth with one out after Zoilo Versalles singled and Barber gave up his fourth walk to Rich Rollins, then went 3-0 to Tony Oliva. Miller completed the walk to Oliva but then Bob Allison hit into an inning-ending double play.

Until the eighth, the only hard blow against Barber was Allison's 12th homer in the fourth inning.

Boog Powell homered for a 1-0 Baltimore lead in the third inning.

The Orioles scored their second and deciding run in the fourth when Luis Aparicio singled and stole second. Sam Bowens doubled to the left field corner, scoring Aparicio.

Southpaw Jack Kralick won his sixth of seven decisions and ran his scoreless inning string to 16, but failed to finish. He was tagged for Chuck Cottier's homer in the eighth and four straight hits in the ninth before giving way to Don McMahon.

Chance, a 222-pound outfielder, accounted for the first Cleveland run in the second with a single off Bennie Daniels after John Romano doubled and Fred Whitfield singled.

Whitfield homered in the sixth and Chance followed with a tremendous drive over the center field fence at the 410-foot mark.

CHICAGO (AP) — Dick McAuliffe scored on Ron Hansen's error with two out in the ninth inning Saturday, giving Detroit a 4-3 triumph over the Chicago White Sox that ended the Tigers' losing string at six games.

The defeat dropped the White Sox out of first place in the American League, one percentage point behind Baltimore, which nipped Minnesota 2-1.

George Thomas singled with one out for the Tigers but was forced at second by McAuliffe. Billy Bruton batted for relief pitcher Larry Sherry and popped to short center field. Hansen dropped the ball, allowing McAuliffe to score all the way from first.

The Tigers, down 3-0, tied the game in the fifth inning. Jake Wood singled home two runs with the bases loaded before Norm Cash singled across the tying run.

Reds 3, Cardinals 0

CINCINNATI (AP)—John Tsitouris and Sammy Ellis combined on a five-hitter Saturday night as Cincinnati blanked St. Louis 3-0, two of the runs scoring on Jerry Buchek's error in the first inning.

Tsitouris left the game in the eighth when his arm tightened after rain forced a 22-minute delay. Ellis retired the Cardinals on two hits in the final two innings.

The Reds scored all of their runs in the first off Ray Washburn who pitched a four-hitter. Tommy Harper's single, a hit batsman and Gordy Coleman's double brought in the first run.

After a walk to Frank Robinson loaded the bases, Buchek fumbled John Edwards' two-out grounder, allowing Vada Pinson and Coleman to score.

After the first inning, Washburn gave only singles to Edwards in the fourth and Tsitouris in the fifth. He suffered his third defeat in five decisions.

Giants 4, Phillies 2

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tom Haller's two-run homer in the ninth inning carried San Francisco to a 4-2 victory over Philadelphia Saturday that vaulted the Giants past the Phils into first place in the National League.

Haller's blow followed a single by Jesus Alou and came after the Phillies had kayoed Jack Sanford and tied the score at 2-2 with a run in the last of the eighth.

Southpaw Billy O'Dell, who relieved Sanford, earned his first victory of the year, while Ed Roebuck, giving up his first runs of the season in 17 innings, took his first loss.

The Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Wes Covington doubled off the right field wall, moved to third on Tony Gonzalez' bloop single, and scored on a sacrifice fly by John Herrnstein.

The Giants tied the score off Dennis Bennett in the fourth as Orlando Cepeda singled and Jim Hart slammed a triple to the 405-foot sign in center field.

Alou broke the deadlock in the seventh with his first major league home run.

Dodgers 9, Mets 2

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy Davis and Frank Howard were benched Saturday and the shake-up paid off for the Los Angeles Dodgers in a 9-2 victory over the New York Mets.

Wally Moon, who played right field in place of Howard, singled home two runs in the Dodgers' three-run third inning. And rookie Wes Parker, who took Davis' place in left field, singled in the fourth and scored on John Roseboro's double. Parker also singled in the sixth, starting another three-run burst that knocked out loser Jack Fisher.

The shake-up by Manager Walt Alston, following Friday night's 8-0 shutout by the Mets, was a drastic one for the World Series champions. Tommy Davis was the National League batting champion the last two years and Howard is the team's leading home run slugger.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Lee Maye slashed a two-run single with two out in the ninth inning Saturday, boosting Milwaukee to a 6-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

The Braves' rally nullified a four-run explosion in the seventh that put the Cubs ahead 5-4.

Chicago reliever Lew Burdette, acquired from St. Louis earlier this week and a former Brave, retired the first two Milwaukee batters in the ninth before Mike de la Hoz singled.

Lindy McDaniel replaced Burdette, and Rico Carty beat out an infield hit, moving pinch runner Woody Woodward to second. Both runners advanced on a wild pitch before Maye singled.

Chicago routed starter Warren Spahn after he retired the first two batters in the seventh.

Billy Williams ignited the uprising with a double to left and came around on Ron Santo's two-bagger to deep left center.

College Ball World Series Opens Mon.

OMAHA (AP) — The college baseball world Series opens in Omaha Monday with Mississippi, Minnesota, Missouri and Arizona State generally considered as the first division of the field of eight.

The other clubs are Seton Hall, Maine, Texas A&M and Southern California.

Missouri brings the most glamorous record — 22 straight victories—into the tourney and because of this string the Tigers could find the law of averages as dangerous a foe as the other clubs.

In a double eliminate series such as the college series, pitchingis always ranked high and in this regard Minnesota may be the best off. The Gophers have a staff that limited competition in the tough Big Ten to an average of two runs in 14 games.

From the standpoint of individuals, Southern Cal and Missouri may have the top pitchers. USC has Walt Peterson, a coaches' All-America choice last year, and Missouri has Keith Weber, who has caught the eye of several major league scouts.

Seton Hall and Maine open the series at 11 a. m. Monday. Texas A&M and Minnesota meet at 2 p.m., Southern California and Missssippi at 6 p. m., and Missouri and Arizona State at 8:30 p. m.

Merchants To Play

The Sedalia Merchants will meet Warrensburg at 2 p.m. Sunday at Liberty Park. The battery for Sedalia will be Bob Brown, pitcher, and Bill Hill, catcher.

Tony Lema Still Ahead In Tourney

RYE, N.Y. (AP) —Champagne Tony Lema pulled off another dramatic eagle in the clutch for a two-under-par 70 Saturday and increased his lead to three strokes through the third round of the $100,000 Thunderbird Golf Classic. He had a 54-hole score of 205, 11 under par.

Just when pursuers were breathing hotly down his neck, the slender stylist from San Leandro, Calif., rolled in a 20-foot eagle putt on the ninth hole, and the pressure was off.

Defending champion Arnold Palmer, his putter ice cold, dropped from the running with a 74 for 213, eight shots off the pace, but big Jack Nicklaus rallied for a 68 which put him back into the fight at 210.

When Lema knocked in a four-foot putt for a hard-earned par on the final hole, he found himself three shots ahead of former footballer Mike Souchak and Bobby Nichols, tied at 208 going into Sunday's climactic round for the $20,000 first prize.

Nichols, starting off with a 20-foot birdie putt and scrambling most of the way, shot a 70. Souchak, the one-time Duke University end, fired a 71.

Big George Bayer came out of the pack with a streak of four birdies in a row for a strong move at the lead, but he three-putted two of the last three holes — the 16th and 18th — for a 68 which put him into a three-way tie at 209.

At the 209 figure also were Ken Venturi, San Francisco's hard-luck guy who, with Souchak, started the day two shots back of Lema, and Bob Duden, the little Portland, Ore., pro who putts croquet-style.

Venturi shot an even par 72, after a front nine 37, and Duden came in with his second straight 70.

Nicklaus, playing better golf each day after an opening round 73, was tied at 210 with U.S. Open champion Julius Boros, Tommy Jacobs — each shooting a 71 — and Phil Rodgers, who had 72.

Reliability Is Insurance Talk Topic

Speaking before the Central Missouri Association of Life Underwriters at their monthly meeting at the Bothwell Hotel, Friday, William C. Hopkins, Sedalia, president of the Missouri Association of Life Underwriters, stated that never in the history of Missouri has the public been misled so many times by some irresponsible life insurance salesmen. Misrepresentations, he said, have become so flagrant the past few months that Superintendent of Insurance Ralph H. Duggins, found it necessary to issue an Order concerning deceptive practices.

Hopkins further commented: "Mr. Duggins and his staff have had numerous complaints, principally concerning agents who unintentionally, or deliberately, refer to policies as 'investor' or 'profit sharing' ones and claiming short term benefits not stipulated in the policy itself.

The life underwriters state president called attention to some of the elements listed in Mr. Duggins' order, dated May 15, and admonished all life insurance men in the state to study these carefully in order not to violate by carelessness any of the areas noted by the insurance superintendent.

"Some agents are reported to be taking a basic life contract approved by the state insurance department for their company and representing it only as an 'investment' ", Hopkins added. He pointed out that Duggins set out in his order that any reference to the investment nature of a life policy which states or infers that a life insurance policy possesses other than what arises from the cash, loan or maturity value thereof, is a violation.

Also mentioned was that any statements that a life insurance salesman makes to a prospect or policyholder which leads that person to believe he will enjoy the status common to that of a stockholder are deemed to fall within the scope of prohibited. In connection with this, it was pointed out by Hopkins that Duggins in his order was adamant in restricting any sales man from stating or inferring that stock of a life insurance company can be purchased contingent upon the purchase of a life contract.

Hopkins also called attention to the group of another section of the Division of Insurance Order No. III-9 (Revised) which prohibits a life insurance salesman from making statements indicating that because the prospect is one of a "limited group," or has agreed to furnish leads, he will be entitled to "special benefits" not available to policyholders generally.

"Many times some unethical, fast talking, uninformed agent will tell his prospect that he will acquire a dividend position similar to that of a stockholder of the company," the state president remarked. "Our association has had many complaints coming in from individuals who never realize they have purchased life insurance because of the many references an agent makes in the sale in which he alludes only to stock throughout the interview. The unethical agent does not delve into the life insurance values because he knows he might lose the sale."

The Missouri Association of Life Underwriters, comprised of almost 1600 life insurance agents throughout the state, are vociferously opposed to companies and agents who have to rely on "gimmicks," "frills," and misleading selling techniques in order to make a sale, Hopkins commented.

Relative Normalcy In Cyprus

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Relative normalcy returned to Cyprus Saturday and the Greek Cypriot government called off an emergency alert with the ebbing of the latest Turkish invasion scare.

Reports which the United States declined to confirm attributed the avoidance of a military showdown to intervention by President Johnson with Premier Ismet Inonu's government in Ankara.

Rumors that Turkey was massing armed forces for a quick invasion on behalf of the Turkish Cypriot minority led President Makarios' regime to call out nearly 30,000 Greek Cypriot homeguardsmen Friday.

The guardsmen donned uniforms, took up arms and spent the night on watch along the northern coast facing Turkey and on the borderline between the Greek and Turkish sectors of Nicosia.

Nothing happened. The night passed without incident — even without the flurries of jittery shooting that have punctuated similar mobilizations at intervals since Christmas.

A U.N. peace force officer said the elimination of such shooting indicated the attainment of a high degree of discipline.

All the guardsmen were released from duty by noon, leaving only normal pickets to stand watch. Other islanders were already at work as usual.

A Greek Cypriot government source said precautions had to be taken following intelligence reports Turkish Cypriots had planned to launch attacks against Greek positions to coincide with attempts to land troops on the island from the Turkish mainland.

Though some nervousness was noticeable among Greeks, the possibility of help from abroad cheered the Turkish Cypriots, who have long been urging such a move to bolster their plans for partition of the island.

The U.N. Security Council is meeting in New York in mid-June to consider extending the three-month assignment of the U.N. peacekeeping force which went into operation here in March.

Ceremonies Honor D-Day Casualties

OMAHA BEACH (AP)—Residents of the Normandy invasion area and Allied officials Saturday hailed the living for their feats of glory and honored the dead for their sacrifices in 20th anniversary celebrations of D-Day.

The official parties sped—under leaden skies—from St. Laurent American Cemetery overlooking Omaha Beach —where lie 9,386 Amercan dead—to St. Mere-Eglise and to Utah Beach. Several thousand local residents, old soldiers back for a look at the battlefields, and two generations of military personnel were on hand at each place to join the commemoration.

As Utah Beach, French and U.S. Air Force transport planes dropped wreaths into the sea.

Reverent remembrance was the main theme of the day, but old soldiers back at the scene of their triumphs were unable to smother a few light notes.

At the dedication of a new airborne museum at St. Mere-Eglise, Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway took note of signs hanging across village streets extolling the 101st Airborne Division that was commanded by Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor.

"I think an agitator has slipped into town," Ridgway said. "You remember it was the 82nd Airborne Division that liberated St. Mere-Eglise."

Ridgway commmmanded the 82nd. At earlier services at St. Laurent, Taylor and Ridgway stood side by side amid French, Canadian, British, Belgian and Norwegian officials.

Back for the ceremonies was John Steele, a native of Metropolis, Ill., now living in Wilmington, N.C.

Steele got caught on the St. Mere Eglise church steeple as he landed in the early hours of June 6, 1944. He hung there for about two hours, feigning to be dead, before he was cut down and taken prisoner. He was liberated a few days later by advancing American troops.

Steele made the return visit as a guest of a Paris newspaper.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, appointed by President Johnson as the head of the official American delegation, became ill Saturday morning and was unable to take part in the ceremonies at the American beaches. An aide said he had an upset stomach. Bradley spent an exhausting day Friday during the first part of the commemorations.

Charles E. Bohlen, U.S. ambassador to France, substituted for Bradley.

At Omaha, riflemen fired a salute and jet fighters roared over the cemetery as a cargo plane dropped a wreath in the waters off the beach. Eleven French warships stood by.

Rare Type Of Germ Causing Epidemic

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—A rare type of germ is causing a typhoid epidemic in Aberdeen, Scotland U.S. Public Health Service officials said.

The germ is so rare that doctors at the Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta are confident it would be spotted immediately should it turn up in this country.

Health workers at ports of entry and other populated centers throughout the United States have been alerted to watch for "Phange Type 34" typhoid, the strain identified as responsible for the Aberdeen cases.

No cases of Type 34 typhoid have been reported in the United States for 18 months, so any sudden appearance of the germ here would be linked to the Scottish epidemic, doctors said.

Atlantic City Waits

EDITOR'S NOTE — Usually the Miss America pageants are held there, but this summer, Convention Hall in Atlantic City, N.J., will be the site of the Democratic conventions shows to pick the party standard bearer in the presidential elections. The following second of two articles on the Republican and Democratic conventons shows what plans are being drawn to make the latter even the biggest and best in the history of this resort town.

By TOM SEPPY

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) —This resort likes to call itself the "Convention Capital of the United States" and it plans to show the country it deserves that title during the Democratic National Convention this summer.

"It's important to us," said one official. "We've never had such an opportunity to put our best foot forward before so many people. This convention has given us the heaviest concentration of exposure we've ever had and we don't want to mess it up."

It is the first time that New Jersey ever has been selected as the site of a national political convention by either major party. With a population of only 60,000, this is the smallest city ever to be host to such a convention.

There have been bigger conventions held in this Atlantic resort city—with its famed boardwalk, hotels, motels, and eating places—since it actively began to seek conventions in an organized manner in 1909. But none of the some 15,000 held in the past —more than 500 were to be held here this year—has put the spotlight so directly on the city.

The convention will open Aug. 24 at the municipal Convention Hall, claimed to be the largest indoor arena in the world. Most hotel and motel rooms are within walking distance of the hall. Some 5,200 delegates and alternates, plus their families and news media representatives and others will bring probably 25,000 to the convention.

The main room of the hall, which can seat 41,000 persons, has no obstructions and is so tall that a 13-story building could be set on the floor without touching the roof. It is at Convention Hall that the annual Miss America pageants are held.

The ballroom of the hall seats 5,000 and there are 34 committee or meeting rooms that can accommodate from 25 to 500 people.

State and city officials and businessmen bid feverishly to get the presidential nomination convention here this year, especially since New Jersey is celebrating its 300th anniversary during 1964.

They made a combined $625,000 financial commitment which included $175,000 from local businesses and city government, $200,000 from the state government and $250,000 from the host committee, a bipartisan group of state businessmen.

The city also agreed to air-condition the hall, a $2-million undertaking that required a bond issue. The hall, which the Democrats will use rent-free, was scheduled to be air-conditioned anyway, but obtaining the convention moved up the completion date to July 1 of this year.

Another $160,000 will pay for 7,000 new seats and $200,000 is being invested in new lighting. Work is well along on the installation of 300 mercury vapor lights in the ceiling of the main hall.

Why is the city investing so much money, especially since many hotel and motel people did not want the convention because it will be here during the height of the summer season—the week beginning Aug. 24?

"On a normally good three-day holiday in the summer, like the July 4th weekend, bank deposits run about $15 million," said one city official. "Spread that over the week the convention will be here and that means some $30 million will be spent in the city.

"And we have a captive audience. Unlike tourists or vacationers, the delegates can't leave the city if we have bad weather."

In addition to the money being invested, city officials have sponsored classes in courtesy, sales and merchandising attended by personnel who will come in contact with the public.

The city's director of public safety, Meredith B. Kerstetter, has been working out the extra police and fire protection required for the convention.

The bulk of the actual physical setup of the hall was not expected to get started until July 1, after the last of the June conventions leave.

Frank H. McCue, general manager of the hall and a 35-year veteran of conventions, will see to it that the seats are placed correctly and that television, radio, magazine and newspaper facilities are in the right places.

Depending on how these finally shape up, he will have plans drawn for a wooden tongue, probably some 40 feet long, running out into the center of the auditorium from the main platform.

"That will be the rostrum," he said, "from which the speches will be made."

The biggest single problem connected with the convention here was dropped into the laps of the New Jersey Bell Telephone Co. and the long-lines department of American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

The job involves the largest service assignment in the history of New Jersey Bell, which expects it will cost upward of $5 million.

Facilities had to be set up for the radio and television networks, as well as extra telephones.

The company is putting in 87,000 circuit miles of cable—a circuit mile consisting of a pair of wires a mile long.

The Congress of Racial Equality has announced plans for mass nonviolent demonstrations to be held in the city to point up alleged racial discrimination in the home states of some of the delegates.

CORE can be expected to be joined by demonstrators from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Student Non - Violent Coordinating Committee and the resort itself.

CHEVELLE by Chevrolet
FRISKY AS IT CAN BE...FINE A BUY AS YOU CAN GET (even finer now!)
Trade 'N' Travel Time is running out at your Chevrolet dealer's. This is about your last chance to get in a whole summerful of fun with a beautiful buy like a Chevelle Malibu wagon.
Allow us to point out some of its less obvious pleasures.
It has curved side windows—not just for looks, but to give you more shoulder room. It has 86 cu. ft. of cargo space, so you can go on vacation with everything but the kitchen sink if you have to.
It has a Magic-Mirror acrylic lacquer finish for protection against the sun, road tar and chipping.
It has those self-cleaning rocker panels beneath the doors that resist rust by flushing themselves free of salt and dirt.
Inside, the upholstery over its wide foam-cushioned seats is soft, durable color-keyed vinyl. All vinyl. The floor carpeting is deep-twist and long-wearing, door to door.
We don't want anything playing havoc with Chevelle's good looks if we can help it.
All in all, there are 11 different Chevelles being offered during Trade 'N' Travel Time. Spacious station wagons, coupes, Super Sports with bucket seats, convertibles, sedans. One's as beautiful a buy as the other. It's up to you. But hurry, whatever you do!

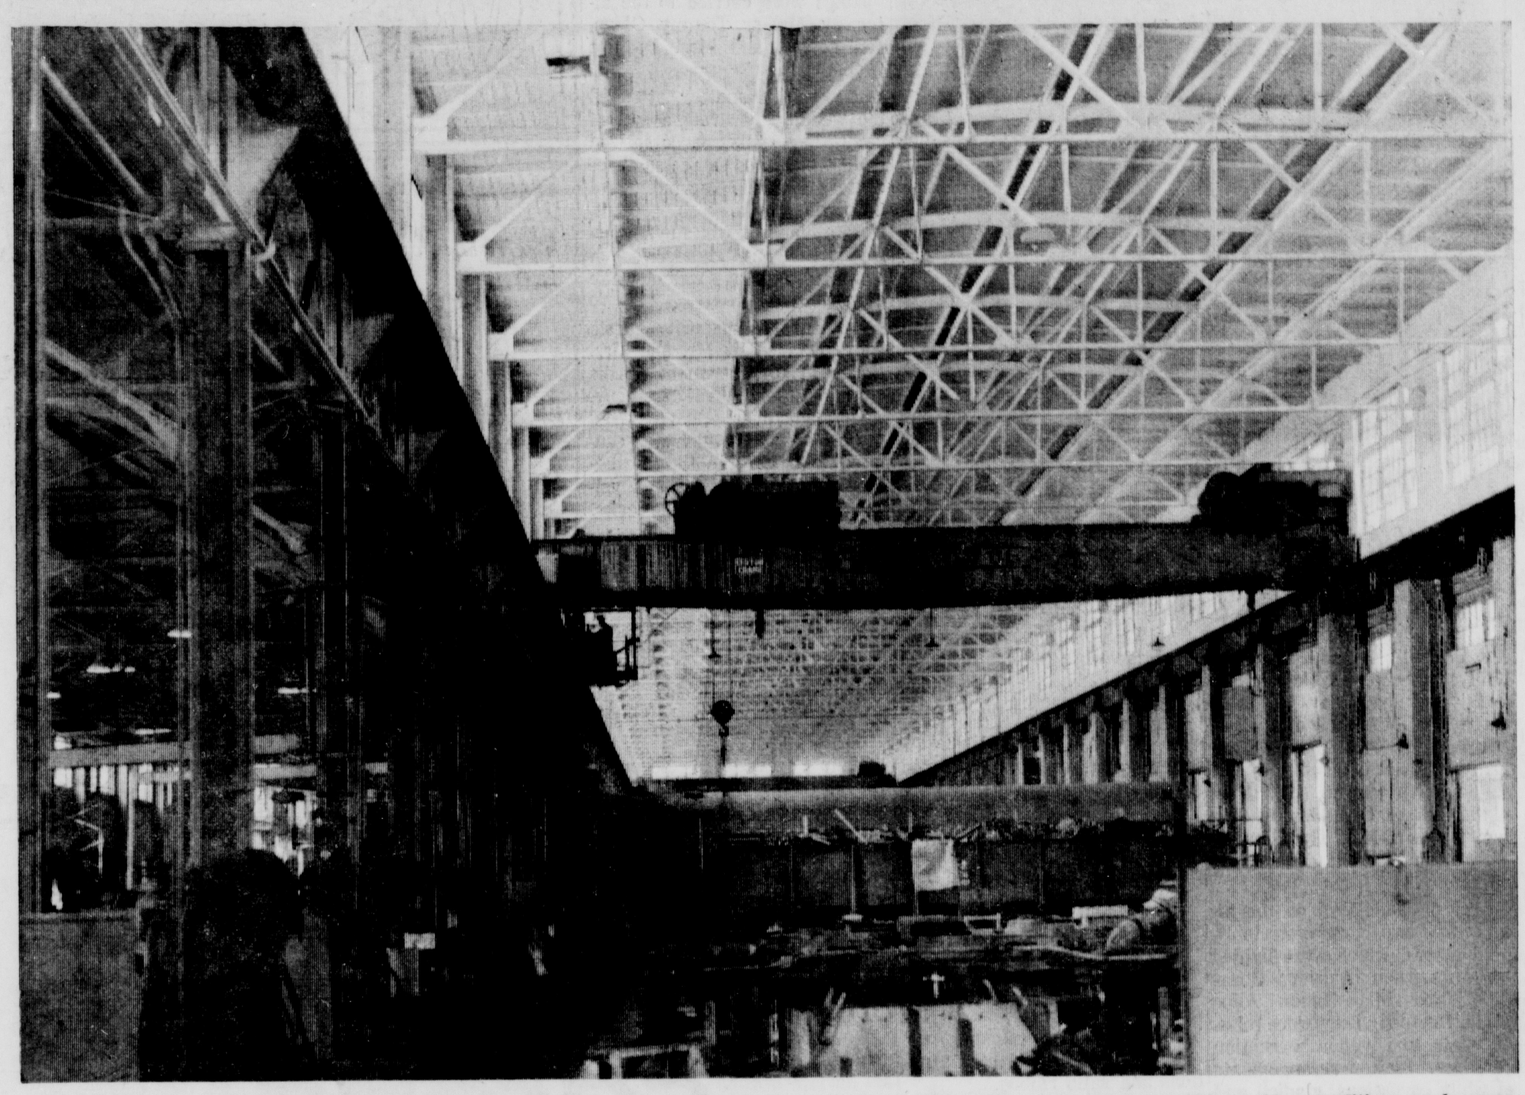
THE SEDALIA DEMOCRAT

Sunday, June 7, 1964 | In Combination With The Sedalia Capital | Feature Section

MoPac Shops Overhaul Is Completed



CONSOLIDATED — Many of the Missouri Pacific Shops operations in Sedalia have been concentrated under the roof of this remodeled building, the Coach Repair Building, in a line-wide effort by MoPac to "Reshape their plant to cope with modern competetive conditions and to eliminate wasteful labor and production costs." In this building are the shop offices, sign shop, seat repair shop, truck shop, upholstery shop, mill, cabinet shop, tin shop, paint booth, and an assembly-line type of repair and rebuilding area for passenger cars. All of the facilities are out in the open, with working conditions made more pleasant with the addition of new rest rooms, a complete light green paint job and a new roof that allows plenty of light to filter through about two blocks of colored plastic windows. Photo was taken from the south end of the building. Foreground is the truck shop portion of the building.

(Democrat-Capital photos).

New Look At Local Facility

By Ralph Jones

"Given a fair opportunity to compete for traffic, to reshape their plant and to cope with modern competitive conditions, and to eliminate wasteful labor costs, railroads can generate the funds necessary to finance huge annual outlays," says J. Elmer Monroe, Bureau of Economics, Association of American Railroads.

Monroe, in a review of railroad operations during 1963, was referring to funds and financial outlays that made it possible for the nation's railroads to embark on a billion-dollar capital improvement program to improve, consolidate, update and revamp their operations to meet modern conditions.

D. B. Jenks, president of Missouri Pacific, reports an increase in net income, but pointed out that the increase did not, and could not, have come from a modest increase in traffic. Rather, Jenks reported, it is largely due to federal income tax credits resulting from new depreciation guidelines issued by the Treasury Department in 1962.

"These guidelines were intended to permit the railroads to modernize their plants by purchasing more new equipment and making other improvements, and to stimulate the national economy. In other words," Jenks said, "this money was made available through tax credits and intended for further use in improving our company. That is just what we are doing."

The results of this consolidation and improvement program have been visible to a great extent in and around MoPac's Sedalia shops for some time, but it was only this week that MoPac officials released the full story complete with whys and wherefores about what has been going on at the shops in the past two years.

Shortly after Mr. Jenks second visit to Sedalia visible change's began to take place at the shops. Some of the buildings, including the shop offices, were leased to the people connected with the Minuteman Missile project in this area. Some of the buildings were torn down. A power line was run into the shops area. Some tracks were removed. Then a six-inch gas main was run into the property.

The shops area two years ago contained some 90 acres of land. With the consolidation, about 50 per cent of this area was found to be "deadwood" and the working shops area began to concentrate in the eastern half of the tract.

Four acres of the northeast corner were sold to the DeLong Co., metal fabricators. Three buildings in this tract are being modernized, as the DeLong Co. prepares to open operations.

In the western half of the area, a few buildings remain, but bare ground shows where many buildings stood two years ago. The smoke of burning railroad ties marks the spot where some 16,000 feet of tracks, no longer useful in the shops' operation, have been removed.

J. S. Simon, shop superintendent, said that some 1,100 tons of old machines and tools have been scrapped, and replaced by newer tools better adapted to the particular types of work now being done in the consolidated shops.

The office and a major portion of the shops operations have been moved to the old machine shop building, which has undergone a renovation itself. The third story has been removed, and a long strip of colored windows on each side of the upper story provide more light for workers.

The old building, now the coach shop, among other things, has been repainted, using paint purchased locally, in line with the railroad president's policy of making local purchases whenever possible all along the line.

This building houses the sign shop, seat repair shop, upholstery shop, wood mill, cabinet shop, tin shop, door shop, truck shop, and 18 tracks containing passenger cars undergoing stripping, general repairs, painting and testing.

In other buildings are the caboose and work car, electric shop, machine shops, signal repair shops and the material storage building.

All of the new or consolidated operations have more room now, and are arranged on an assembly-line basis for maximum production with a minimum of supervision.

A major change-over was indicated when the electric power and gas lines were installed. Formerly, the shops used oil for heat and to manufacture electric power. Now, electricity and gas are purchased locally, and pass through a central "power house" where steam is generated, and air compressors operate to feed air to the entire shop. Oil is used for stand-by fuel, for emergency use in case of gas failure.

A new sand-blast building has been built just east of the coach building, to blast and clean metal parts of machinery before painting. Entire cars may enter the building for complete sanding. The sand is fed from a car on a siding that runs alongside the building. If the used sand is not too dirty or oily, it is reused. Formerly sand blasting was done by the individual departments as needed.

The signal rebuilding shop is not new, but it is a good example of how the railroad refuses to throw anything away if it can be salvaged at a saving. The thousands of delicate component parts of signal relays, electric remote signal equipment, flasher light control equipment and all of the thousands of other pieces of signal gear in use throughout the system are sent to Sedalia for rehabilitation.

In the coach shop it is evident that the railroad keeps up a good housekeeping program. Here, surplus Pullman cars are converted into passenger coaches. Some of the old-style passenger cars are being converted to special work equipment. In short, if an old car can be rebuilt, or converted to some useful purpose, it goes to the Sedalia shops for rebuilding.

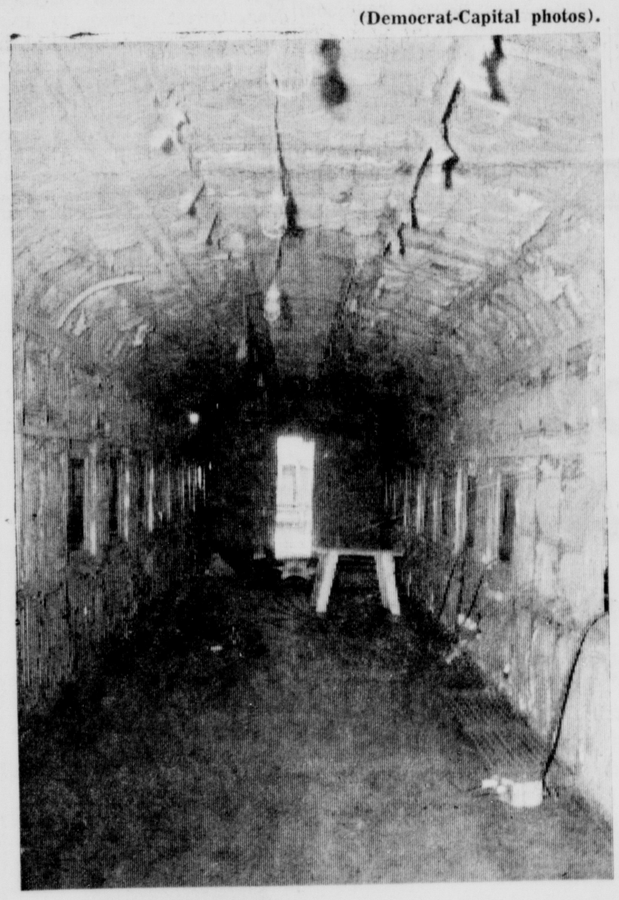
The modern sign shop located within the coach shop produces all of the assorted signs used on the MoPac and Texas & Pacific system. It specializes in metal reflector-type signs, insignia and numerals, in color, too. The basic material comes in rolls, and through a silk screen process the shop can produce the company's own signs rapidly and economically.

Company emblems are silk-screened in the familiar red and white colors on a reflectorized base, then applied directly to the outside surfaces of locomotives and other equipment. An adhesive backing permits the sign to be applied to wood or metal, eliminating the old

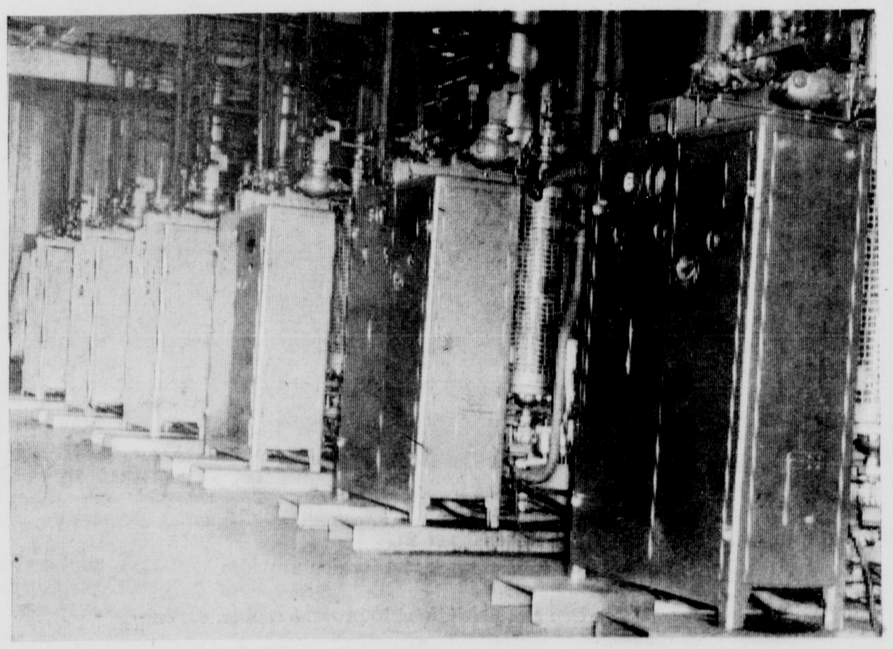
(Please turn to page 7, column 1)

SUPERINTENDENT — James S. Simon, Shops Superintendent, keeps in touch with foremen in all departments by two-way radio. This modern communication system between departments saves time and money for the company, while insuring a smooth-running operation.

SAND BLAST BUILDING — This new sand blasting building consolidates all of the shop sand blasting in one area. Previously, sand blasting was done in each separate department as needed. The car on the right contains sand, which is fed to the blasting machine. Inside the building is a car being blasted clean before repair or renovation work is started. Sand can be recovered inside the building, cleaned and re-used.

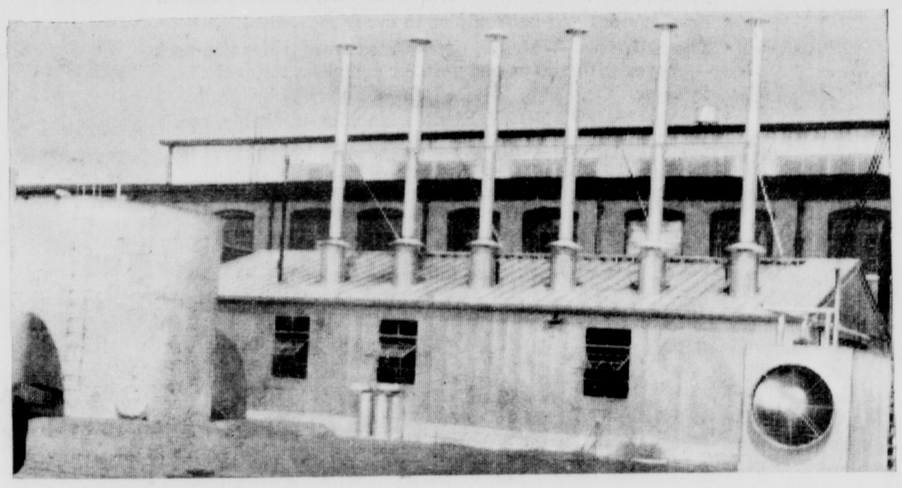


STRIPPED — This is the interior of one of the sleeping cars that have been received at the MoPac shops after workmen have completed the stripping process. The car will be rebuilt into a coach on the shop assembly line.



STEAM IN SECONDS — These six gas-fired generators in the new "power house" can produce steam to be used throughout the plant in a matter of seconds. The generator on the right was timed and steam pressure was obtained in 24 seconds from starting. Formerly, steam was obtained by use of oil-fired boilers.

REMODELING — This is the interior of a former sleeping car being remodeled into a coach. After the car was stripped, the interior was completely rebuilt. Above, the rebuilding operation is almost complete. The tile flooring has been installed on the left half of the floor, the interior walls have been installed, and the shop upholstery and seat repair installations will furnish the seats. When it rolls onto the line the rebuilt car will be as good as new.



POWER HOUSE — This small new building takes the place of the huge old power house with its oil-fired boilers used to produce steam for the shops area. The six steam generators indicated by the stacks get fuel from a six-inch gas main recently installed. On the left is a storage tank for oil that would be used to produce steam for heating the plant "in case of a gas failure." In the background is the new roof of the coach building, which was installed after the upper story was removed.

SIGN SHOP — This photo illustrates the effectiveness of the reflective signs produced in the new sign shop. Against the camera flash the signs reflect an intensity of light comparable to the bright sunlight outside of the building. The shop produces all types of reflective signs, emblems and numerals for the Missouri Pacific and Texas & Pacific railroads. The signs do away with spray stencils, hand-painting signs and re-painting weathered signs. The new signs are durable and are particularly effective against headlights at night.

Mrs. Alfred Wray Young

Pricilla Ellis, Alfred Young United in Marriage in Spring

A lighted cross was the only altar decoration at First Christian Church when Miss Priscilla Newman Ellis became the bride of Mr. Alfred Wray Young at three o'clock Saturday afternoon, May 23. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. James Ellis, Route 2, and the late Mr. Ellis. Mr. Young is the son of Mrs. R. L. Young, Smithton, and the late Mr. J. P. Young. The Rev. Harry Purviance, pastor, performed the ceremony.

At the sides of the communion table, 14 candles were held in spiral candelabram, entwined with smilax.

Mr. Harold J. Johnson, violinist, played "The Swan" by Saint-Saens, "I Love Thee," Greg, accompanied by Mrs. Allen Caveness, church organist. As the mothers were seated, Schubert's "Ave Maria," was played by the two. Mrs. Caveness played traditional wedding marches and, before the ceremony, a medley of wedding music.

Candles were lighted by Mr. Michael Bruns, Kansas City, Mr. Jack Birdsong and Mr. Bennie Pummill, who also served as ushers.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her brother, Mr. James Mayo Ellis. She wore a floor length gown of white Jaquard cotton lace, styled with a batteau neckline and below the elbow sleeves. A white satin cummerbund, with a flat fringed bow, was the only trim. A matching pillbox hat, veiled with bridal illusion, fell to her waist at the back. Her bridal bouquet was crescent arranged white shasta daisies and English ivy, tied with streamers of white satin.

Dressed in a street length version of the bride's dress, was Miss Eunice Hudson, Smithton, maid of honor. The dress was trimmed in willow green satin and her slippers were dyed to match. Circular veiling matched the willow green satin pillbox. Her flowers were like the bride's, tied with green satin ribbon.

Mr. Michael Smith, Smithton, was best man.

Miss Stacy Ellis, daughter of Mrs. Betty Ellis and Mr. James Ellis was flower girl. She wore a gown of white organza and carried a white basket filled with white daisies. Ivy and white daisies banded her hair.

A spring blue voile dress, white accessories and white gardenias were selected by the bride's mother. The mother of the bridegroom wore a light blue ensemble trimmed in navy blue. Her accessories were white and her corsage was of gardenias.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church hall for approximately 150 guests. The reception was arranged by Mr. James M. O'Daniels, Ames, Iowa, uncle of the bride. The bridal table was centered with lighted candles in crystal candlebra, loaned for the occasion by Miss Rebie Shaffer. The table was covered with white net over satin. Shasta daisies, white roses and white snapdragons were placed on the table. The four tiered cake was highlighted on the bridal tier with white wedding bells. Ivy encircled the punch bowl and cake. Mr. O'Daniels cut the cake, assisted by Mrs. William Cecil. Miss Martie Ford served punch.

Coffee was poured by Mrs. Leslie Hele, Sedalia, and Mrs. Allen B. Potter, Bowling Green. The coffee table was set with a silver service and a silver candelabrum, holding five lighted tapers. The cloth, of imported cut linen, was loaned for the occasion by Mrs. James O'Daniels, aunt of the bride.

A rehearsal dinner was held at the Old Missouri Homestead.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Chancellor, 1223 East Sixth, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Burna Dean, to Mr. Homer Dewitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Dewitt, Route 5. A fall wedding is planned.

Mrs. Michael Bruns, 500 South Grand, was hostess at a bathroom shower April 4. She used pink and white for her color scheme. Gifts were distributed from a white rose tree.

On April 24, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Turner and Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Fords were hosts at a buffet for Miss Ellis and Mr. Young.

Mrs. Doyle David Bryce

Candlelight Wedding Unites Sandra Glenn, Doyle Bryce

Cathedral tapers furnished light for the seven o'clock Saturday evening, May 30, marriage of Miss Sandra Jean Glenn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan T. Glenn, Otterville, to Mr. Doyle David Bryce, 1530 East Sixth, son of Mrs. Joseph Joslyn, Newark, N.J. The Rev. R. W. Furkin read the double ring ceremony.

Arched candelabra on the altar and two brass candelabra held tapers, which were lighted by Miss Dian Aldrich, Otterville, and Miss Linda Alice Mills, Dresden. They wore robes of white and yellow carnation corsages. Basket arrangements of white carnations, gladioli and greenery and greenery entwined railings completed the altar setting.

Mrs. Jim Fariss, III, Mulvane, Kan., played traditional wedding music at the piano. She accompanied Miss Charlotte McDowell, Otterville, who sang, "One Hand, One Heart" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father the bride wore a wedding gown of Chantiliy lace and organza. The dropped diminutive bodice was fashioned of lace, with long tapering sleeves and a scalloped Sabrina neckline. Iridescent sequins and pearls defined the lace pattern of the yoke. Appliques of lace highlighted the flaring organza skirt, which lengthened to a sweep train and was finished at the back with a butterfly bow. Her headdress was a flared lace tiara, which held her veil of illusion. She carried a white orchid, nestled in net and cascaded with white carnations and satin ribbon.

Miss Sharon K. Glenn, Otterville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Miss Susan Renfro served as a bridesmaid. They wore dacron polyester over taffeta gowns in mint green. Four tucks controlled the skirt fronts. Scooped necklines and small capped sleeves were styled with the fitted bodice. Each gown had two tiny sheer bows at the waistline. The two carried cascade arrangements of yellow daisies with green net and yellow ribbon.

Best man for the bridegroom was Mr. Tom Boehm. Mr. Larry Marcum of Otterville was groomsman.

Before the wedding, Mr. Ricky Mills, Dresden, and Mr. Larry Marcum, Otterville, escorted guests to their seats.

Miss Tammy Deuschle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Deuschle, was flower girl. She wore a silk organza over taffeta white gown, sashed with white satin.

Rings were carried to the altar by Master Tommy Glenn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Glenn.

The bride's mother attended the wedding, wearing a suit of navy blue silk, accessorized with white and a corsage of white gardenias. The mother of the bridegroom, also present, wore a blue and white nylon jersey dress and accessories of white. Her corsage was of white carnations.

One hundred and fifty guests were received by Mr. and Mrs. Bryce in the basement of the church after the ceremony. White lace over green covered the bridal table, which was centered with a three tiered wedding cake. White bells and yellow roses decorated the cake. White candles were held in crystal candelabra, which were entwined with yellow roses.

Serving were Mrs. Earl Routon, Otterville, and Mrs. Bill Renfro. The guest book was attended by Mrs. Albert Kreisel. Reception arrangements were made by Mrs. Cleo J. Smith, Otterville.

White accessories accented low brocaded dress which the bride wore for the wedding trip. The couple is now at home at 1530 East Sixth.

The bride, a graduate of Otterville High School, will be a senior in the fall at Missouri Valley College, Marshall. The bridegroom is an electrician apprentice at Missouri Pacific Shops.

LET'S TALK ABOUT "COLOR SCHEMES"

Mrs. Studer

Popular colors in upholstered furniture, draperies and floor coverings change from time-to-time, just the same as they do in women's fashions.

You might be interested in knowing that a recent nationwide survey at the furniture mart in Chicago shows that golds and yellows are the No. 1 best seller now in upholstered furniture, followed by olives, greens, blues, turquoise, orange and pumpkin.

But the best rule in selecting the 'basic" color for your living room, or any room in your home, is to start wtih a color YOU like best.

Some like monotones, or different tones of the same color used throughout a room. Others like contrasting or harmonizing colors. Either plan, with careful study, can be equally effective.

But you must start some place. In a livingroom it is best to start either with your floor covering or your sofa or sectional, and work out your color scheme from there. You can also select your wall colors first and then pick the rest of your furniture and furnishings to harmonize with your walls.

Some decorators prefer neutral colors for sofas or sectionals which enable them to use a great deal of color in chairs and accessories.

Please feel free to let us help you with any of your "color" problems.

If you prefer in-the-home decorating assistance, phone TA 6-2122 for an Appointment. There's no obligation.

WASHINGTON—Mrs. Claudia (Lady Bird) Johnson is living the life of First Lady as if she held an "office" that belongs to all the people.

Only a few short months into her new role, she stands out as perhaps the only real challenger in this century for the "activist" crown long worn by the late Eleanor Roosevelt.

With great energy, with what she herself likes to call "willingness of the heart," Lady Bird faces up to the clamorous demands of White House public life and yet insistently manages to hold aside a part of each day for her heavily burdened husband and her two daughters, Lynda and Luci.

She finds the time to lunch with Lynda, to press Luci on her school work ("Do you have a quiz?"), to listen closely through long evenings as the President discusses with his experts such things as the anti-poverty fight.

But she is determined to be continuously responsive to the call of the countless Americans who want their "first family" out where they can see them, lending support to all manners of endeavors. Follow her as she goes through a week's activities:

We can start on a rainy spring morning in Cleveland, Ohio, where she travels for a swift series of events.

First she visits a "Golden Age Center," a public housing development for the elderly. In bright coral coat and beige hat, she strolls into a cheerful room to greet a group of oldsters celebrating all the birthdays of the past three months.

In one corner an old fellow scrapes out "Yellow Rose of Texas" on a scratchy violin. Holding a yellow rose corsage, Mrs. J smiles appreciately.

The "Golden Age Choir," gray-haired ladies from 60 to 78, rise and chirp: "When the red, red robin comes bob-bob-bobbin' along, along . . ."

Mrs. Johnson applauds with vigor, holding her arms well in front of her. On her feet, she says: "It's such fun to share this birthday with you all." Before she leaves the room, she carefully places on a table a packet of cards bearing her signature and an etching of the White House.

She looks over the center's clinic, some of the oldsters' craft work, greets many as she walks. She stops in to chat with two women in one of the small but neat apartments. To the one whose place it is, she hands the red carnations given her earlier at the airport.

As tears come to the woman's eyes, Lady Byrd says: "I hope you live a long and happy time."

By midday, the First Lady is on the rostrum at a bustling YWCA convention, her coral coat shed, fresh now in a bright print dress of many colors, smiling as always, an orchid corsage at her shoulder. A lei of orchids brings the flower gifts of the day to four.

With the packed assembly, she recites a prayer, sings a hymn, listens attentively to other speakers, then dons her white-rimmed glasses to read a short, prepared speech.

As is her habit, she reads with slow precision, gesturing lightly now and then, sticking tightly to the text, lowering her voice to muted levels for occasional emphasis. The accent: pure Texas.

One hour and one more black limousine ride later, she stands tired but still smiling in a receiving line at an airport motel, as hundreds of "women doers," activists in many fields, file past her.

Among them is a good mixture of those who "do" in politics. For Lady Byrd unabashedly accepts the fact her role is not just public but also political. Her guest lists for many functions reflect the reality that any president is a political personage.

Lady Byrd's Cleveland day is so crowded that one woman reporter forgets to describe how she is dressed. Says another: "Don't worry. You filed it a month ago, from Huntsville, Ala." The outfit was the same as on a previous venture.

It was the reporter's way of noting Mrs. Johnson's frugality with clothes.

Let's take another day, in the Capital. It's a big one, to be capped with a "state dinner" for a visiting head of state, young King Hussein of Jordan.

Following custom, Lady Bird is up at 8, breakfasting with the President off a tray in their bedroom. No time for leisurely reading this morning, though her bedside table ("It never looks neat," says a friend), is cluttered with books and magazines.

With her social secretary, Bess Abell, she runs down the evening guest list, one at a time. Mentally, once in a while aloud, she walks through all she must do from the moment of greeting the king.

Then she carefully inspects each of the gifts she and President Johnson will give the king and his family. This, says Mrs. Abell, is "so she will feel entirely comfortable with what they are giving."

A bit later Mrs. Johnson has a talk with Lynda, telling her about the king and his younger brother. The First Lady wants her daughter to mingle with the distinguished visitors in the evening. Notes Mrs. Abell: "Mrs. Johnson wants to make the girls a part of her busy life, to open new windows and horizons to them. She does not wish to have them feel they might want to go off and hide somewhere."

As the morning wears on, Mrs. Abell's telephone rings from time to time and she jots notes to Lady Bird, her voice suggesting unruffled authority, discusses future plans.

At noon, garbed in total yellow, Mrs. Johnson makes a brief appearance in the Agricultural Department's sunny interior court to dedicate a "Home and Food Fair." Says she:

"This is just the sort of thing I'm glad to know is going on."

Again, she makes a brief speech, describing herself as "purchasing agent for my family," and opens the fair by expertly clanging a farmer's triangular dinner gong.

After that she moves about to see the exhibits, tossing out lively questions along the way. With a quick "I enjoyed it," she pops into her limousine and dashes for Capitol Hill for a luncheon with Senate ladies.

The afternoon demands final dinner preparations — and getting herself ready.

She could have her hair stylist come to the White House, but instead she trots off to the beauty parlor like any other housewife.

It's a considerate gesture, though it compels the Secret Service to prowl the beauty shop with care.

For dinner Lady Bird is once more in her favored yellow, wearing a chiffon dress with a beaded bodice. The after-dinner entertainment features Dave Brubeck's avante-garde jazz. He shatters a little of the East Room's complacency with tunes like "Take Five" and "Shimwah."

The guests, sitting on gold-backed chairs in dim blue light, eat it up. Mrs. Johnson is first to rush to Brubeck to shake his hand when the concert ends.

A round of dancing follows in the Blue Room. Suddenly the party is over, the king of Jordan is gone, and Lady Bird is at the door warmly bidding the guests goodnight. She drifts quietly upstairs.

On another day, a bit past the tea hour, the East Room bustles with an assortment of guests, many of them North Carolinians.

A hush falls as Mrs. Johnson appears, this time in a white dress. She takes a seat up front near a lectern that has been set up. Waiting expectantly, she holds erect, her head tilted slightly to the left, bright smile wreathing her face.

In a moment she is at the lectern accepting for the White House some beautiful color prints of paintings made in 1585-86 on North Carolina's Roanoke Island by one John White, early colonial governor.

The British Museum, which holds the originals, is the gracious giver.

The guests soon form in a reception line to meet her. Some she greets as old friends, with lingering, laughing chats or warm embraces. Coffee and cakes in the resplendent State Dining Room give her a chance to mingle more casually.

A few days later, she is at the same "stand" at the same hour, with only the cast of characters changed.

Thus it is for Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, the lively 51-year-old lady from Texas, week after week after week.

She goes to New York to honor Eleanor Roosevelt or open a refurbished museum (as she soon will), to Wilkes Barre, Pa., to observe grinding poverty first hand.

To her door at the White House comes the nation: hundreds of congressmen and their wives in a long round of receptions, "first families" of one state or another, groups speaking for charities, for cancer, heart disease or muscular dystrophy drives, members of the country's 4-H clubs, distinguished guests like Carl Sandburg and photographer Edward Steichen, who take tea with Lady Bird in the historic Lincoln Room of the White House.

Through all this she fights for time for herself and her family. She loves serious theater and catches it when she can. In New York she may sneak away for just an hour or so in a famed art gallery.

In the White House, she may feel from time to time that she spends a huge part of her week in the great public rooms in smiling confrontation with Americans of all walks.

Yet she still can manage to worry whether the President is working too hard. And she never forgets to be a mother.

One night she discovered daughter Luci doing her algebra in, of all places, the historic second floor Treaty Room. As a mother she welcomed the effort. As First Lady she felt the study setting inappropriate. She shooed Luci back to her bedroom.

That's how you play it when you hold unofficial office from the people.

WASHINGTON (AP)—In the news from Washington:

WARREN: The Warren Commission, investigating the slaying of President John F. Kennedy, has decided to hear more testimony from the widow of Lee Harvey Oswald, accused of the assassination.

In announcing Tuesday that Mrs. Oswald would return on June 11, the commission declined to say why she is being recalled.

CASTRO: State Department press officer Richard I. Phillips has denounced as "absurd and preposterous" charges by Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro that the United States is conducting germ warfare against Cuba.

Scoffing Tuesday at Castro's statement that three men executed in Cuba were agents of the Central Intelligence Agency, Phillips said:

"Castro self-servingly brands opponents of his regime as CIA agents whenever it suits his purpose to do so. I have no other comment on that charge."

CRASH: Federal Aviation Administrator Najeeb E. Halaby predicts the May 7 Pacific Air Lines crash in which 44 persons were killed near Concord, Calif., may soon be reclassified as a "case of murder and sabotage."

During a discussion of airline security measures Tuesday, Halaby told newsmen he expects the FBI and the Civil Aeronautics Board to issue a statement soon on their investigation of the crash.

The plane went down on a flight from Reno, Nev., to San Francisco, killing all aboard.

Naomi Gibbs Entertains At ABWA Meeting

The American Business Women's Association held its dinner meeting Tuesday evening, June 2, at Bothwell Hotel, with Miss Naomi Gibbs presenting the entertainment. Miss Gibbs, who is from Kansas, is a variety artist, is here to assist with the Bible School of the First Baptist Church now in progress.

The first part of her entertainment was a fantasy in literature in a puppetry featuring a witch whose ambition was to fly. Then a melodrama done in chapography with the artist dressed in a black cape and chopeau and impersonating the different characters, a sad mother, an emotional daughter, cruel villain and a courageous cowboy.

The program concluded with a Bible story of Daniel told by Sandy, the dummy, assisted by Miss Gibbs, the ventriloquist.

Group singing was led by Mrs. Nathalia Poynter, with Mrs. Raymond Hall at the piano.

The business meeting was presided over by Miss Margaret Bohon, vice-president, in the absence of the president. Cards were read from Miss Ella Peithman, a member, who is touring Europe.

The educational committee reported Carolyn Miner, a graduate of Smith-Cotton, as the student chosen to receive the $75 scholarship award.

A food and fun dinner was planned for June 8 at 6:30 p.m. to be held at the home of Miss Gwendolyn Tuck, 1525 West 14th.

After the business meeting games were led by Mrs. Poynter.

Erhard Visit With Johnson Next Week

BONN, Germany (AP) — Balancing carefully between his American and French allies, Chancellor Ludwig Erhard of West Germany makes a quick trip next week to see President Johnson in Washington.

Less than a month later, French President Charles de Gaulle will come to Bonn for talks with Erhard. The date he has picked for this visit, two years in a row, is July 4—the American national holiday.

Erhard has to do some canny tightrope walking to keep his balance in foreign affairs even within his own Christian Democratic party. An important group led by former Chancellor Konrad Adenauer feels he ought to lean more toward France.

On the one hand Erhard and Foreign Minister Gerhard Schroeder have gone down the line for the U.S. position on the limited nuclear test-ban treaty and an Atlantic nuclear force. Their government has signed the treaty even though the rival Communist government in East Germany was also allowed to do so. West Germany is the strongest backer of the multilateral nuclear force. De Gaulle will have nothing to do with either the treaty or the force.

On the other hand, Erhard and Schroeder have felt compelled to go along with De Gaulle's veto of Brutish entry into the European Common Market. The United States strongly favored Britain's entry.

What is more, Erhard now spends considerable time and energy advocating tighter cooperation within the Common Market through a political as well as an economic union of the six member countries — France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg. Under present circumstances, there is no chance of Britain getting in.

On other issues, West Germany has interests of its own, and the influence of other countries becomes less important.

On Southeast Asia: Eager to avoid any suspicion of militarism or imperialism, West Germany does not want to send troops there. It has even resisted the American suggestion that a German military hospital would be useful in South Viet Nam. Some modest additional economic aid is likely.

The Soviet Union: West Germany is trying to improve its relations with the Soviet Union and its satellites, partly for trade purposes. The United States is strongly behind this, and there has been no direct objection from the French. But in West Germany itself there is criticism from Adenauer and his supporters, who fear a softening in Bonn's opposition to the Communist government in East Germany.

Jaycee Wives Appeal For Civil Defense

Mrs. Bette Wise, a member of the Jaycee Wives, has made an appeal in the name of that organization in maintaining an adequate Civil Defense program in Sedalia.

In a letter to members of the Pettis County Court Mrs. Wise wrote:

"We of the Jaycee Wives have heard that a part-time Civil Defense unit is planned for Sedalia and Pettis County and also have heard that the complete abandonment o fthis worthy project is being considered .

"We as a group would like to express strong objection to either of these alternatives. We feel that a full time Civil Defense director is needed to continue the work already done by this fine organization.

"We sincerely hope that Pettis County Court will think of Civil Defense as a good insurance policy against National and local disaster. Insurance policies always cost money—Civil Defense is insurance."

To the Honorable L. L. Studer, Mayor of Sedalia, Mrs. Wise wrote:

"We of the Jaycee Wives feel that we as a group make up an excellent cross section of opinion for our city.

"The Jaycee Wives have officially gone on record obecting to the discontinuance of Civil Defense for Sedalia and Pettis County. Civil Defense, we feel, is everybody's business and this includes Sedalia. We intensely feel that it is an insurance policy against National and Local disaster, well worth the money appropriated each year by our City, County, State and Federal governments. We feel that our proximity to Whiteman Air Force Base puts sharp teeth into these opinions and Civil Defense is also helpful in local disasters such as tornado activity.

"Mr. Studer, we of the Jaycee Wives sincerely hope that you will reinforce our faith in our city government by continuing the worthy efforts of Civil Defense for our city and county."

In a further appeal to the people of the community Mrs. Wise asks:

"Is it going to take a National emergency to make us here in Sedalia and Pettis County to realize the importance of Civil Defense? Do we have to have crises such as that of the Missiles in Cuba Crisis? Is it necessary for one of our large cities the size of New York to be wiped off the map before we here in Sedalia and Pettis County are willing to appropriate the necessary funds for a workable Civil Defense Unit?

"We of the Jaycee Wives believe that our local authorities—our City Council and Pettis County Court, should think of Civil Defense in terms of money ce policy. We cannot think of Civil Defense in etrms of money no more than an ordinary citizen thinks of money when he buys an insurance policy for his home, car or life. We are not hoping that we will have to use the policies as we are not lookingforward to death, tragic accidents, or fire. Having insurances, however, gives us the feeling of security in the event of disaster—when our home burns we are given necessary funds to rebuild, when our car is wrecked or burned, the insurance companies come to the rescue.

"It is also the opinion of the Jaycee Wives that Civil Defense is our insurance against national emergency, local calamities, such as tornadoes. Our proximity to Whiteman Air Force Base makes Sedalia and Pettis County a prime target for atomic attack.

"We must have full time Civil Defense director to adequately take care of the needs of Civil Defense. A part-time director would be only slightly better than none at all. We sincerely believe that a full time Civil Defense Director is very important, just as important as some of our other city and county positions that are now taken care of in our budgets. It is true that Civil Defense is fairly new to our area as compared with the local police department, the Sheriff's department or the Highway Patrol. This, of course, does not make it less important.

"Please—let us not pinch pennies when it come to life and living."

The thousands of tiny glass particles embedded in the material reflect their message day or night, and are particularly effective at night when reflecting automobile headlights at grade crossings.

This shop is also building a new-type transfer caboose using the basic steel underframe of an old wooden caboose. In making the new caboose, the old car is stripped down to the underframe, and a ten - foot-square steel cabin is mounted in the center of the deck. Handrails are installed around the remainder of the deck. As the cabooses are used around terminals only, a minimum of interior equipment is needed. The company saves thousands of dollars by convering old cars into modern cabooses.

Some 15,000 parts are on hand in the material storage rooms for use primarily by the Sedalia shops. An intricate card record system in use throughout the MoPac system shows what parts are on hand at the Sedalia shops, or in any of the other material storage facilities maintained by the company. Through an inventory control system any of these parts can be located in a few seconds anywhere on the system and dispatched as needed, to or from Sedalia.

Average monthly employment including all activities at the shop, totals just about 300, and the same average monthly payroll amounts to about $124,000.

Hazards of Helpfulness

All kinds of answers are given to explain the tendency of people not to want to become involved in personal intervention or calling of police when they witness crimes committed or see persons in distress.

Psychologists will tell you a person's subconscious mind dictates the impulse to stand by apathetically and mind his own business, rather than trying to become a Good Samaritan.

There may be other reasons for this disinclination to go to the aid of others in distress. Maybe the attitude of over-cautiousness comes from having read about such incidents as the following which reveal lack of appreciation when help is given:

A wealthy New Yorker sued his club for letting him drink instead of protecting him from a medical and psychological ailment thus causing him to lose control over drinking. He also sued a hospital for alleged negligence in treating him for injuries from a fall after downing liquor he says he should not have been allowed to consume. Next the devil may be sued for tempting him.

Then there is the case on a railroad train of a medical doctor going to the aid of a fellow passenger seized by a heart attack. He was sued by the man's family when the attack turned out to be fatal.

A physician vacationing in the Virgin Islands performed an emergency operation to try to save the life of a resident who had been electrocuted. He was repaid for this helpfulness by being arrested for practicing without a Virgin Island license.

Such cases have become so universal, a doctor is getting to the point where he, too, doesn't want to become involved with strangers in physical distress on the highways or elsewhere.

We understand New Jersey has put an end to this nonsense by passing a law which will absolve all medical practitioners of any liability in comparable circumstances.

Also there are uncounted records of cases in which laymen's interventions to thwart robberies, assaults, rapes and other criminal activities have met with painful and sometimes mortal reprisals.

Incidents similar to these may partially explain why there is increasing disinclination among peaceful men and women to intervene on behalf of strangers in distress.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: "Not Exactly Mild-Mannered."—"I am not exactly a mild-mannered campaigner myself . . ." said Harry Truman in a rare moment of understatement the other day. Suddenly we realized how indelibly the Truman manner remains in our minds. He was supposed to be so colorless when he assumed the presidency. He proved to have a spectrum all his own.

Now at 80 Mr. Truman warns today's campaigners against sacrificing the national interest for partisan political advantage. As for himself, he has changed his mind and "won't run again" at 90.

The partisan feelings of politicians and music critics have cooled as Mr. Truman's distance from the White House has lengthened. Or so it seems to us. Even though, from time to time, he still says things not calculated to win friends or influence Republicans.

At the opening of the World's Fair, he called himself "an old has-been." The crowd said, "No." And so do we. "I hope you will remember what I have been and not what I am today," said Mr. Truman. As we read of him now, getting to his office at 7:30 in the morning, before the staff comes in, we want to remember him not only for his decisive days as President but his unretiring retirement since then.

Bay of Pigs Insubordination Probe

(Editor's Note: Drew Pearson is on a news-gathering trip in the Middle East. In his absence his column is written by his associate, Jack Anderson.)

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — In the film farce "Dr. Strangelove," an overseas commander with the ominous name Gen. Jack D. Ripper, cuts communications with Washington so he can't receive orders canceling the war plans he would like to carry out.

Now a similar incident has been described, not in fiction, but in an authoritative account of the Bay of Pigs invasion. And Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., chairman of the Senate subcommittee on Latin-American affairs, is investigating.

The alleged insubordination is reported by Haynes Johnson in his book, "The Bay of Pigs," which is based on exhaustive interviews with the men who fought and failed there. Indeed, he was encouraged by no less than Attorney General Robert Kennedy to set the record straight on that unhappy event.

The real-life Jack D. Ripper is identified by Johnson only by his secret code name. He was a flush-faced fellow, known to the Cuban Freedom Fighters as "Frank," who directed preparatiosn for the invasion.

According to Johnson, Frank heard rumors that powerful people in Washington were trying to block the invasion. He called in the Cuban commanders and told them to stage a mock mutiny in case the stop order came through.

Who Is Frank?

"They were to place an armed soldier at each American's door, cut communications with the outside, and continue the training," Johnson reported.

Thus Frank would pretend to be a prisoner but would turn over to the Cubans "the whole plan" for the invasion.

"In the end," he is quoted as saying, "we will win."

Senator Morse is determined to find out who the mysterious Frank is, whether he actually had plotted to countermand White House orders, and what disciplinary action has been taken against him if the story is true.

This column has learned that Frank is an Army Colonel who was loaned to the Central Intelligence Agency for the Bay of Pigs invasion but has now returned to Army duty.

The CIA had no inkling of the Jack D. Ripper incident until the publication of Johnson's book. Summoned in for questioning, Frank denied that he ever had any intention of ignoring or circumventing his instructions from Washington.

However, he pleaded with the CIA not to divulge his identity. This not only would hurt his career and embarrass the Army, he said, but might also endanger his family. He feared some Cuban hothead, bitter over the Bay of Pigs fiasco, might take revenge against his children.

Any More Oswalds?

The Warren Commission is now putting down on paper its conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald, the misfit ex-Marine, joined in no conspiracy but was guided by his own mixed-up motives when he gunned down President Kennedy from a Dallas window last November.

But this raises another urgent question. How many more Oswalds are there: military directors who have come back from Communist countries, men trained in the use of weapons and explosives, who, for dark reasons none but they can understand, may be capable of desperate acts?

Of the 22 Army defectors who have returned from behind the Iron Curtain, probably half are mental cases. Only three are safe in asylums. The others were given the routine turncoat treatment: court-martial, prison terms, dishonorable discharge.

For instance, Army records describe a California youth, who stayed behind the Iron Curtain only a few days, as "paranoid and schizophrenic." Yet the Army sentenced him to three months for desertion, then turned him loose.

A GI from Kentucky, who had a history of mental illness, was given one year of hard labor, then set free. Other mental misfits have fared the same.

Some Pentagon people are now beginning to wonder whether these cases were properly handled. They are worried about another Oswald, mentally disturbed, who may have been turned loose by the Defense Department to pursue his own lunatic purposes.

Note: Commanders with men near the Iron Curtain have been warned to be on the watch for potential Oswalds and to weed them out.

GOP Dollar Drought As Party 'Fat Cats' Hedge

By BRUCE BIOSSAT
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON — Republicans who know what they are talking about fear that this may be one of the worst money-raising years in the party's history.

In the view of one who has rustled funds for a long string of campaigns, there is one overriding reason:

Many Republican "fat cats" simply are not willing to bet their bankrolls that President Lyndon B. Johnson can be beaten in November. And some, whatever their public stance, are not eager to see him defeated. He is the most "comfortable" Democrat they have had around for a long time.

Party fund-raising veterans think they already observe signs of a severe 1964 dollar drought. They believe that by midsummer the full weight of the problem will be upon them.

SEN. BARRY GOLDWATER has had money difficulties in his campaign for the nomination, but some party men have sought to explain this on the ground that some contributors do not want to kick in twice in the same year. Others say the senator's troubles are symptomatic of the general prospect.

If, as expected, Johnson declines to meet the 1964 GOP presidential nominee in a series of televised debates, Republican financial matters could take an even grimmer turn. The party's choice would lose a large amount of free television time coast to coast. And he may be needing all the exposure he can get.

Those who are worrying over the prospective money crisis doubt that it can be exaggerated. They believe everybody in the party should be fretting over it.

Generally, it can be said that the worriers are not in the camp of New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller. But most feel that the wealthy governor is the one man who, as nominee, could see to it that the 1964 campaign bills will be paid.

The judgment is that fund-raising would be hardest if the GOP nominee is either Goldwater or Richard Nixon, usually rated the most likely compromise choice.

ONE OF THE IRONIES in this siutation is that in a number of key states men who HAVE contributed to Goldwater's nomination fight may apply maximum pressure on delegates to put Barry over quickly at San Francisco.

One midwestern leader guesses that in his state such pressure might be worth 20 first ballot votes to Goldwater. Says he: "If the money men are tough enough, they could get those added votes. But I know these delegates. If left to their own devices, they won't go that way."

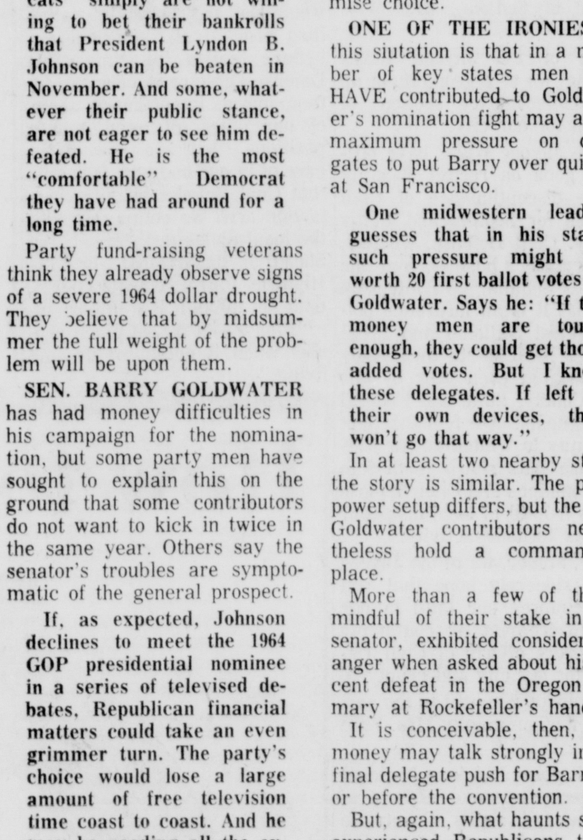
In at least two nearby states the story is similar. The party power setup differs, but the pro-Goldwater contributors nevertheless hold a commanding place.

More than a few of these, mindful of their stake in the senator, exhibited considerable anger when asked about his recent defeat in the Oregon primary at Rockefeller's hands.

It is conceivable, then, that money may talk strongly in the final delegate push for Barry at or before the convention.

But, again, what haunts some experienced Republicans today is the prospect that when the real election show begins the crackle of crisp currency will be heard all too little on the GOP side of the line.

BERRY'S WORLD



"I CAN LICK ANY ROCKEFELLER-MAN IN THE HOUSE!"

Democrat Pick-ups

Well — everybody has their ambitions I suppose — but some sound a little odd.

"No," said the woman to her friend, "I am not going to be able to go to the meeting — I'll tell you, I have an opportunity to take part in a rummage sale — and that is something I have always wanted to do —"

So the golden opportunity had at last arrived — she had a chance to gather up some of the things she doesn't want — and probably a few things she will find out later she did want — and sell them at a rummage sale — or cart them back home if they don't sell. But since it has always been her ambition it is worth missing her meeting for — there is nothing quite like the fulfilment of a big ambition. H. L.

ON HER CHERRY TREE were just about enough cherries for one nice pie, so the woman took precautions and in some manner covered the tree to keep the birds from eating those few cherries.

When they were ripe she went out one morning, picked most of them but before she had completely finished her telephone rang and she hastily put the pan down and rushed into the house. She was gone about ten minutes, and when she returned the cherries— or most of them — were gone, too.

It was real kind of her, the birds probably thought, to pick those cherries and leave them there in the pan for them. It was a lot better than having to tug to get them off the tree.— H. L.

FOR SEVERAL months members of an organization had been putting money in the tin birthday box each week—when somebody had a birthday in went some change—or maybe a dollar bill.

On this particular day the tin box was to be opened — and there was a little ceremony about an honest man to count it, and somebody was given the job.

The box was opened, the money counted and it amounted to $13.14.

That was real good they all agreed.

Then someone asked the vice president, who was presiding in the absence of the president, what the money was to be used for.

He couldn't remember. Not only that, the man who had collected the birthday money could not remember either. And none of the other members could remember.

They all remembered that it was started to be used for something special, but nobody could remember what it was. Now if the president isn't able to remember what it is for either they have a nice special fund of $13.14 started for whenever they remember whatever it was —and if nobody ever remembers they still have a special fund of $13.14 for no particular reason. — H. L.

FINDING THE WAY

Heed Those Bells

BY RALPH W. LOEW, D.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

It was quite a fact which Prof. Ivan Pavlov, Russian physiologist, discovered in his now-historic experiment. He had rung a bell, put out the food and a little dog ate. This association of bell and food was so real that after a time the professor discovered that all he had to do was to ring the bell and the dog's saliva flowed.

Now advertisers try the same trick. Tone rhythms and the ringing of certain bells are used to identify a wide range of products. Just ring the bell, or tap out a certain rhythm and the "response" is supposed to follow.

It's really an ancient idea. Across the hillsides the blowing of the horn had meaning for travelers. The Angelus announced the fact of worship, so that the man in the field could pause in those days of many-houred labor, halting to pray. And Walt Whitman could write in that famous poem:

O Captain, my captain! our fearful trip is done
The ship has weathered every wrack, the prize we sought is won,
The port is near, the bells I hear, the people all exulting.

But then suppose that Pavlov's dog forgot about the food, what would the bell mean? Then would the saliva flow? Is that why the television advertiser has to tell us every day that certain rhythm means his product?

In World War II the opening, telegraphic notes of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony became the "V for Victory" symbol that swept a weary and tested people.

Suppose they had not known the meaning of those sounds? Would the saliva of morale have flowed?

This is the predicament of modern man. He hears the sounds without knowing their meaning. And if there is no one to tell him Sunday after Sunday, or if he does not hear, how will he know that the bells are calling men to see beyond the things which dimension their lives until they come to worship?

In the states of the Communists the bells are silenced and in the times of war the bells are melted into cannon. But in our time the bells become silent in the mind of the hearer, so that listening to the bells he has no understanding of their meaning. After a time he doesn't even know that he hears them.

It will not be enough then just to ring the bells. Somehow an eternal message must be associated with the ringing.

Perhaps that's the greatest problem we confront today. We assume that each succeeding generation will automatically understand the idea. Someone once asked if all persons were Christian, how long would it last? He answered his own question with the assertion, "Until the next baby is born."

This is true of all education. Over and over again, the persistent, patient challenge of teaching and communicating must be repeated. Either that, or religious illiteracy in this increasingly secularized world will take all meaning from the ringing of the bells. Those teachers in Sunday Schools, those parents in their family circles, those neighbors who sustain every influence of religious understanding, are making this prayer come true:

"Through all the passing years, O Lord,
Grant that, when church bells are ringing,
Many may come to hear God's word. . ."

Shoes On Closet Wall

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY— To get our shoes off the closet floor, my husband drove nails in the wooden strip that goes around the back and sides of the closet wall— about half way up. Easy selection and neat too. — WILDA

GIRLS — This is agood idea, but I have hooks that hold my purses on that wooden strip. Take your choice. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I have found an easy eay to carry a hot casserole dish to a potluck dinner. I place a sturdy, thick magazine inside a large paper bag and then slide the casserole into the bag on the magazine. I can then carry it on my lap without burning myself. — MRS. E. E. F.

DEAR POLLY — My husband is tall, long-waisted and a bit thick through the middle. He always has the problem of shirts separating in the center front when they pull out the slightest bit. The last button on each shirt was just barely below his waist, so I always add another button and buttonhole two or three inches below this. When his shirt eases out a bit, it stays together and he certainly looks neater. I do hope this helps other long-waisted husbands as much as it has mine.— MRS. W. P.

Comparison

It really didn't matter,
The flowers were not so rare,
I'm having them dug up soon
And so I didn't care,
But what if they'd been lilies
Or a special brittle kind,
Or a very lovely garden—
I'm certain then I'd mind;
They couldn't help the ball
Coming over in my yard—
I think they try not to,
But I'm sure not very hard,
Still it came and so a boy came,
I watched him trample down
Flowers—which for him had no meaning,
On his face there was a frown,
I could tell he was disgusted
That he couldn't find his ball,
I really had no business
Having flowers so thick at all,
I'd saw them cross my neighbor's yard
Which she keeps so very nice,
A half a dozen times one day,
Not merely once or twice;
But as I watched this youngster
To mind did I recall
Another little boy one day
Who, like him, lost his ball—
He came and knocked upon my door
And soberly he said:
"I think our ball dropped somewhere
"There in your flower bed,
"I would like to look for it
"If it's all right with you
"And I'll be very careful
"Not to hurt your flowers, too."
So I went out with him
And we looked and found it there—
And as I watched this boy today
I couldn't help compare,—
All through life we find some people
Who tromp down our flowers,
Who think they have a right to
Just anything that's ours,
And then we find the other kind,
The kind who really cares
Who treat the other fellow's things
Exactly like 'twas theirs,
It's strange how someone thoughtless
Can suddenly bring back
A memory of a person
Who possesses what they lack.

Bowles Switch Hitting In Asia

By CONRAD FINK

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The smiling American, dust on his face and the wind ruffling his hair, walked slowly through a crowd of farmers squatting in a dry field in western India.

Shoving aside a chair, he sa on the ground among the farmers under a burning sun.

"Now," he said, "tell me your problems."

Chester Bowles, U.S. ambassador to India, was at work.

After recovering from their astonishment at seeing a white sahib sitting among them, the gaunt, turbaned farmers loosed a torrent—not enough to eat, fields drying up, cattle starving, no jobs, everybody sick.

"O. K." Bowles said, "we're going to help. The people of the United States are with you."

Then he paused for emphasis. "And, I'm glad to see you're building a new road and trying to help yourselves."

In 29 words, it summed up the Bowles approach—an approach that makes him one of America's most effective ambassadors in Asia. It is: he who helps himself can expect help from America.

As a diplomat, the 63-year-old Bowles is a switch hitter.

He is a visionary and idealist by nature, a man at home with ideas and long-range thinking. He speaks and writes beautifully and fluently on the problems of underdeveloped nations, masterfully weaving the perspective of history into a hard-headed approach to today's problems.

He can philosophize with philosophers and chew the fat with farmers.

The other side of Bowles is a gnawing impatience with the administrative details of running a "diplomatitc shop."

"He's a lousy administrator," one intimate said.

Bowles has surrounded himself with bright young men who make housekeeping decisions. Bowles gets on with what he feels is an ambassador's real job.

Dressed in faded slacks and a sport shirt that flaps in the wind, Bowles zips around India in a U.S. Air Force plane, spreading his message.

At his side, more often than not, is his wife Dorothy—"Stebby," he calls her in an affectionate shortening of her maiden name, Stebbins.

Many Indians are intrigued with Bowles' unaffected attempts to be normal. They delight in telling good natured stories about him.

One has it that Bowles had to borrow a pair of formal striped pants to wear at the ceremony in which he presented his credentials to the Indian government. When he showed up at the president's office, so the story goes, the pants quite visibly were several sizes too large.

Another source of Indian delight is Bowles' refusal to live in Roosevelt House, the ultra-modern official residence complete with winding staircase and fish pond on the embassy grounds.

"Hell," he reasons, "a fella could never be comfortable in a place like that."

So, the Bowles live in a rambling house fillled with comfortable furniture and books off a tree-shaded street several miles from the embassy. Diplomats, officials and newspapermen sometimes gather on the back porch and lawn.

All this has made Bowles easily the best known diplomat in New Delhi.

Leftist writers, however, are gunning for him by name almost every day.

One rabidly anti-American newspaper tabbed him the "imperial governor-general" and said he feels he has a divine right to dictate to India.

Bowles is attacked bitterly for what some Indians feel is pro Pakistan sentiment in U.S. official circles or Washington attempts to force a sellout of India's interests in the disputed Himalayan state of Kashmir.

Though Bowles claims these attacks do not bother him, they have introduced a note of cautiton in his method of operation.

Thus, Bowles did a "diplomatic duck out" in April when Sheik Mohammed Abdullah, Kashmiri independence leader, visited New Delhi for talks with Prime Minister Nehru.

Officially, Bowles went to the mountains to escape the brutal summer heat in New Delhi and recuperate from a minor stomach ailment. But, it was learned, Bowles was trying to avoid entanglement in the India-Kashmir squabble.

The risk of such entanglements and losing friends for America instead of making them is an occupational hazard with U.S. ambassadors in India and Bowles is careful in dealing with government officials.

Indian sources say he never approached Prime Minister Nehru with the standard, "My government has instructed me to inform you—"

Instead, the sources say, Bowles was likely to go into Nehru's office with a wry grin on his face and explain, "Look, Mr. Prime Minister, this is our position. Now, how about—"

Bowles' greatest problems are overseeing the giant U.S. economic aid program—more than $5.4 billion since 1951—and fanning the embers of pro-American sentiment lighted by the speedy way Washington reacted with military aid during the India-China border war in 1962.

A native of Springfield, Mass., Bowles made his first career in advertising. During World War II, he switched to government service and was director of the Office of Price Administration.

He was governor of Connecticut 1948-1950 and a member of the House of Representatives 1958-1960. In 1951-53, he was ambassador to India and Nepal.

Then came tours as undersecretary of state and President John F. Kennedy's special representative and adviser on African, Asian and Latin American affairs.

There was a clash of ideas and personalities with some members of Kennedy's administration, however, and he left Washington and returned to India.

The transition didn't dampen his enthusiasm.

"I'm just the kind of fellow," he says, "who would rather say a bottle is half full, and not that it's half empty."

Mitzi Gaynor Box-Office Sales Victim

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Mitzi Gaynor is a victim of box-office chemistry.

And that may also be what's wrong with the movies.

The last time Mitzi was cast opposite the right leading man —Rosanno Brazzi — the picture, "South Pacific," wound up seventh in the top 10 list of all-time moneymaking films.

Her next two pictures were comedies opposite Yul Brynner and Kirk Douglas.

Result: Mitzi had to go into the nightclub field where she commands $40,000 a week.

At the Las Vegas Flamingo she was given two points—two per cent — of the action of the entire hotel-casino operation to sign a 10-year contract.

Jack Entratter of The Sands, who wishes he had her under contract, comments:

"She's the only new night club star to emerge in the last decade."

But there are no movie scripts. Josh Logan once said Mitzi can do more things better than anyone else in Hollywood.

That's partly her trouble. When Brynner and Douglas, both serious actors, chose Mitzi, she was so good that she cade them look bad.

A smart producer would cast her opposite Jack Lemmon or Cary Grant — and you would have a female Sandy Koufax pitching against a Willie Mays.

Also, she was producer Ray Stark's first choice to do "Funny Girl" on Broadway, but declared:

"I knew I wouldn't be believable as Fanny Brice so I turned it down. And look what Barbara Streisand is doing with it."

Jack Bean, her husband and manager, explains why she refused the role:

"Fanny Brice was no beauty. Neither is Barbara — she kids about it herself. Look at Mitzi. How can you make her unpretty?"

Now, Stark has another Broadway show called "The Passionate Witch," based on the old Fredric March-Veronica Lake movie "I Married a Witch."

Mitzi's interested. If she takes it, you may see a repetition of the Betty Grable saga.

For years, Betty couldn't get herself arrested around Hollywood. Then she did "Dubarry Was a Lady" on Broadway and the movies discovered her.

For the next 10 years, she was in the movies' top 10 box-office list — usually the only woman there.

Smashup Kills Two

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP)—Two persons were killed and four others were injured Thursday in a smashup of two cars and a milk truck.

The wreck occurred during rain on U.S. 36 about two miles west of the Missouri River in Kansas.

The dead were Mrs. Fredric Haffer, 43, of South Bend, Ind., and Miss Marilyn Mauzey, 18, of St. Joseph.

The injured were Fredric Haffer, 50; and three companions of Miss Mauzey, Sabra Dunlap, 20; Carol Campbell, 17, and Christine Johnson, 18, all students at St. Joseph Junior College.

The Kansas Highway Patrol said the girls' car flipped over on its side while trying to pass another car and was rammed in the top by the Haffer car. Both cars bounced into the milk truck driven by Harold Wykert of Troy, Kan. He was not hurt.

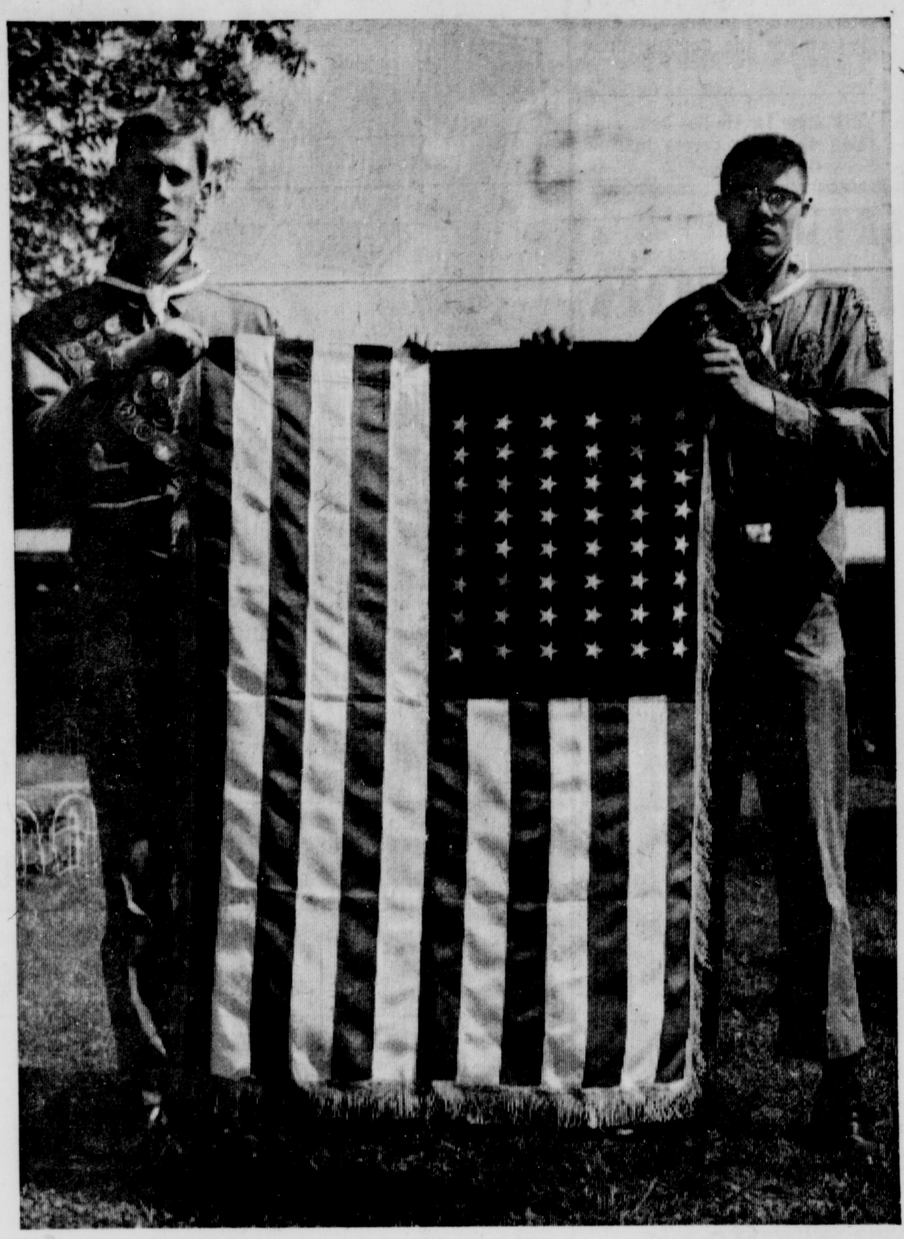
Display Your Flag Correctly

FLY YOUR FLAG ON Flag Day June 14



FLAG DAY — JUNE 14TH

HOW NOT TO DISPLAY THE FLAG — In these three photos, Eagle Scouts Kenny Fine, (left), son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Fine, 1608 West Tenth; and Paul Mowry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mowry, 1611 West Ninth, demonstrate how the American Flag should not be displayed and call attention to the fact that June 14 is Flag Day. Public Law 829 tells how the Flag should be displayed. When the Flag is hung against a wall, the blue field should be uppermost and to the Flag's own right, not as the boys display it in the photo showing the Flag in a vertical position. Nor should the flag be displayed in the horizontal position shown here. A good rule to remember — the blue field should be at the upper left (the Flag's own right). when the display period has ended (sunrise to sunset) the Flag should be folded appropriately, as the Scouts demonstrate, and carefully stored. No object should ever be placed on the Flag nor should it be allowed to touch the ground. The proper way to destroy an old Flag, is not by discard, but by burning.

Bare Maja Banned

ROSEVILLE, Mich. (AP)—Mrs. and Mrs. Edgar J. Herz say they have too much heart to consider separation from their house pet—a 120-pound African lion named Caesar.

The 23-year-old newlyweds, who work as veterinary assistants, said they will sell their bungalow in this Detroit suburb if it bans lions as residents.

Roseville's City Council has ordered an ordinance up for adoption Tuesday that would ban wild animals as pets. Caesar is the reason for it.

Caesar has been both defanged and declawed, and Herz says he is "too much like a timid, dependent child for us to abandon him to strangers."

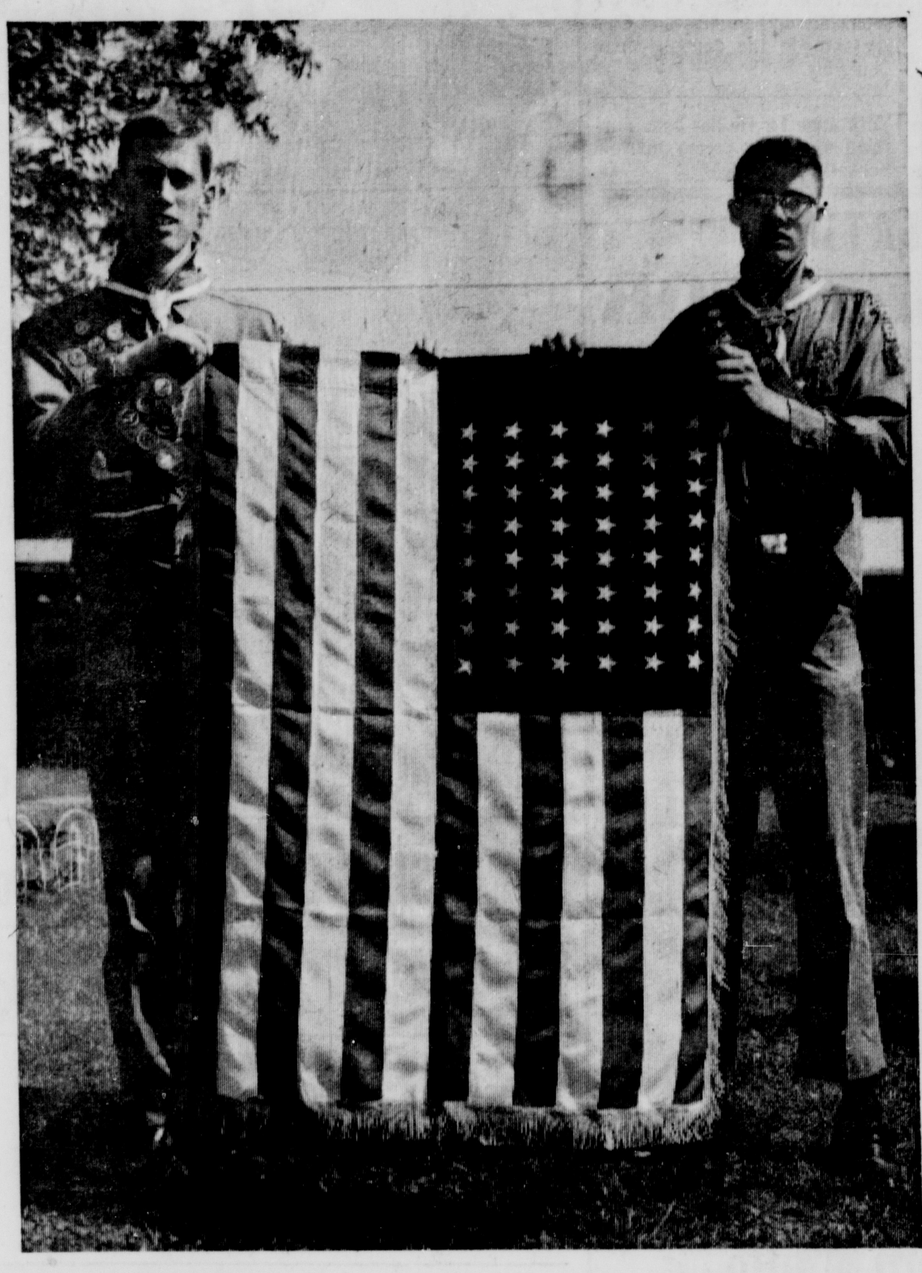
Display Your Flag Correctly

FLY YOUR FLAG ON Flag Day June 14



FLAG DAY — JUNE 14TH

HOW NOT TO DISPLAY THE FLAG — In these three photos, Eagle Scouts Kenny Fine, (left), son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Fine, 1608 West Tenth; and Paul Mowry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mowry, 1611 West Ninth, demonstrate how the American Flag should not be displayed and call attention to the fact that June 14 is Flag Day. Public Law 829 tells how the Flag should be displayed. When the Flag is hung against a wall, the blue field should be uppermost and to the Flag's own right, not as the boys display it in the photo showing the Flag in a vertical position. Nor should the flag be displayed in the horizontal position shown here. A good rule to remember — the blue field should be at the upper left (the Flag's own right). when the display period has ended (sunrise to sunset) the Flag should be folded appropriately, as the Scouts demonstrate, and carefully stored. No object should ever be placed on the Flag nor should it be allowed to touch the ground. The proper way to destroy an old Flag, is not by discard, but by burning.

Bare Maja Banned

ROSEVILLE, Mich. (AP)—Mrs. and Mrs. Edgar J. Herz say they have too much heart to consider separation from their house pet—a 120-pound African lion named Caesar.

The 23-year-old newlyweds, who work as veterinary assistants, said they will sell their bungalow in this Detroit suburb if it bans lions as residents.

Roseville's City Council has ordered an ordinance up for adoption Tuesday that would ban wild animals as pets. Caesar is the reason for it.

Caesar has been both defanged and declawed, and Herz says he is "too much like a timid, dependent child for us to abandon him to strangers."

Edmundson, a physical education major, has been employed as coach at Green Ridge School.

Tight Ring Of Security In 3 Nations

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The heaviest security precautions of modern times in placid Scandinavia are being prepared for Nikita Khrushchev's visit to Denmark, Sweden and Norway.

The Soviet premier reaches Copenhagen on June 16 to start a 19-day visit to the three countries.

An attempt to blow up the royal estate in Oslo where Khrushchev will stay, a reported threat by a Fascist organization in Sweden to assassinate him, the presence in Stockholm of a sizable colony of bitter refugees—all these have prompted an elaborate security screen.

Denmark's entire police force of 6,700 men will be on the alert. His only trip outside the Copenhagen area will be to the island of Funen, which has 150 secular policemen. Some 400 to 500 extra policemen will assist.

The Stockholm police chief has ordered 600 extra policemen from the provinces to reinforce his security forces. He is spending several hundred thousand crowns—about five crowns to the dollar—for new equipment to protect Khrushchev, including pistols, squad cars, radio-equipped motorcycles and several miles of rope to restrict crowds.

From the time of his arrival here the security question will overshadow all others with Swedish authorities. The quay normally used by ship arrivals borders the old town with its tall buildings. There are too many windows that cannot be effectively guarded.

Khrushchev's ship will moor instead at the small island of Kastellholmen near which the 17th century warship Wasa foundered (raised recently, it has become a tourist attraction). This island is connected with a larger one which has naval installations. In turn it is connected with the central quay by a single easily guarded bridge.

Norwegian security officials are concerned that a man who tried to blow up the village on the royal farm near Oslo, where Khrushchev will stay, is walking around free—and may not be found before the visit.

The bombing incident occurred May 19. A night watchman discovered a man with a dog near the villa. The man disappeared through a fence when he was challenged. On the ground the watchman found a homemade bomb with four pounds of explosives, a fuse and a detonator.

Stockholm's Expressen—Scandinavia's largest daily with usually well-informed news sources—reports that an underground Fascist organization is openly threatening to kill Khrushchev.

The newspaper attributed this threat to the "Swedish-Croatian Association Croatia," an offshoot of a Yugoslav party during World War II.

The English seacoast town of Broadstairs and St. Peters was a favorite resort of Charles Dickens, who described it as "left high and dry by the tide of years," according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Mrs. Breuning Gives Program for Guild

"Voices From Private Worlds" was the subject of a talk by Mrs. Edwin Breuning at the June 4 meeting of Women's Guild, Immanuel United Church of Christ, which met in the service building. The subject concerned help for handicapped and aged.

A trial sermon will be presented by a minister at 7:30 Friday at the church. Contributive dinner will be served at 6:30. Each family was asked to bring one or two covered dishes.

Mrs. Carl Zimmerschied reported on the May 17 farewell party for the Rev. Armin F. Klemme and his family. The family was given a stereo AM FM radio and money to enlarge its record library. Guests numbered 147.

The annual birthday party for Boonville Training School boys will be held July 18, with Mrs. Breuning as chairman.

Third Lawyer For Ruby Is Stepping Out

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Jack Ruby's third chief defense counsel, legal-medical expert Dr. Hubert Winston Smith, has resigned to return to teaching at the University of Texas Law School.

Another defense lawyer, Phil Burleson, announced the action Tuesday and said he and Joe Tonahill will carry on the legal battle for Ruby, convicted of slaying Lee Harvey Oswald, accused assassin of President John F. Kennedy.

"We do not anticipate any new attorney in the case and do not for the present see any necessity for one," Burleson said.

Smith was not present Monday when Burleson and Tonahill conferred with Judge Joe Brown about Ruby's mental condition. They contend he has become insane since his March 14 conviction and sentencing to death.

Burleson said Smith felt he should return to teaching "to sustain himself and his family." He had accepted the case without a fee. University regents ruled Smith must take a leave of absence without pay while working on the Ruby case.

Ruby's original chief lawyer was fiery Melvin Belli of San Francisco, who was dismissed after the trial for remarks about the jury and Dallas.

His replacement, Percy Foreman of Houston, quit after four days over what he called a disagreement with Ruby's family.

Feuding Royal Cousins:

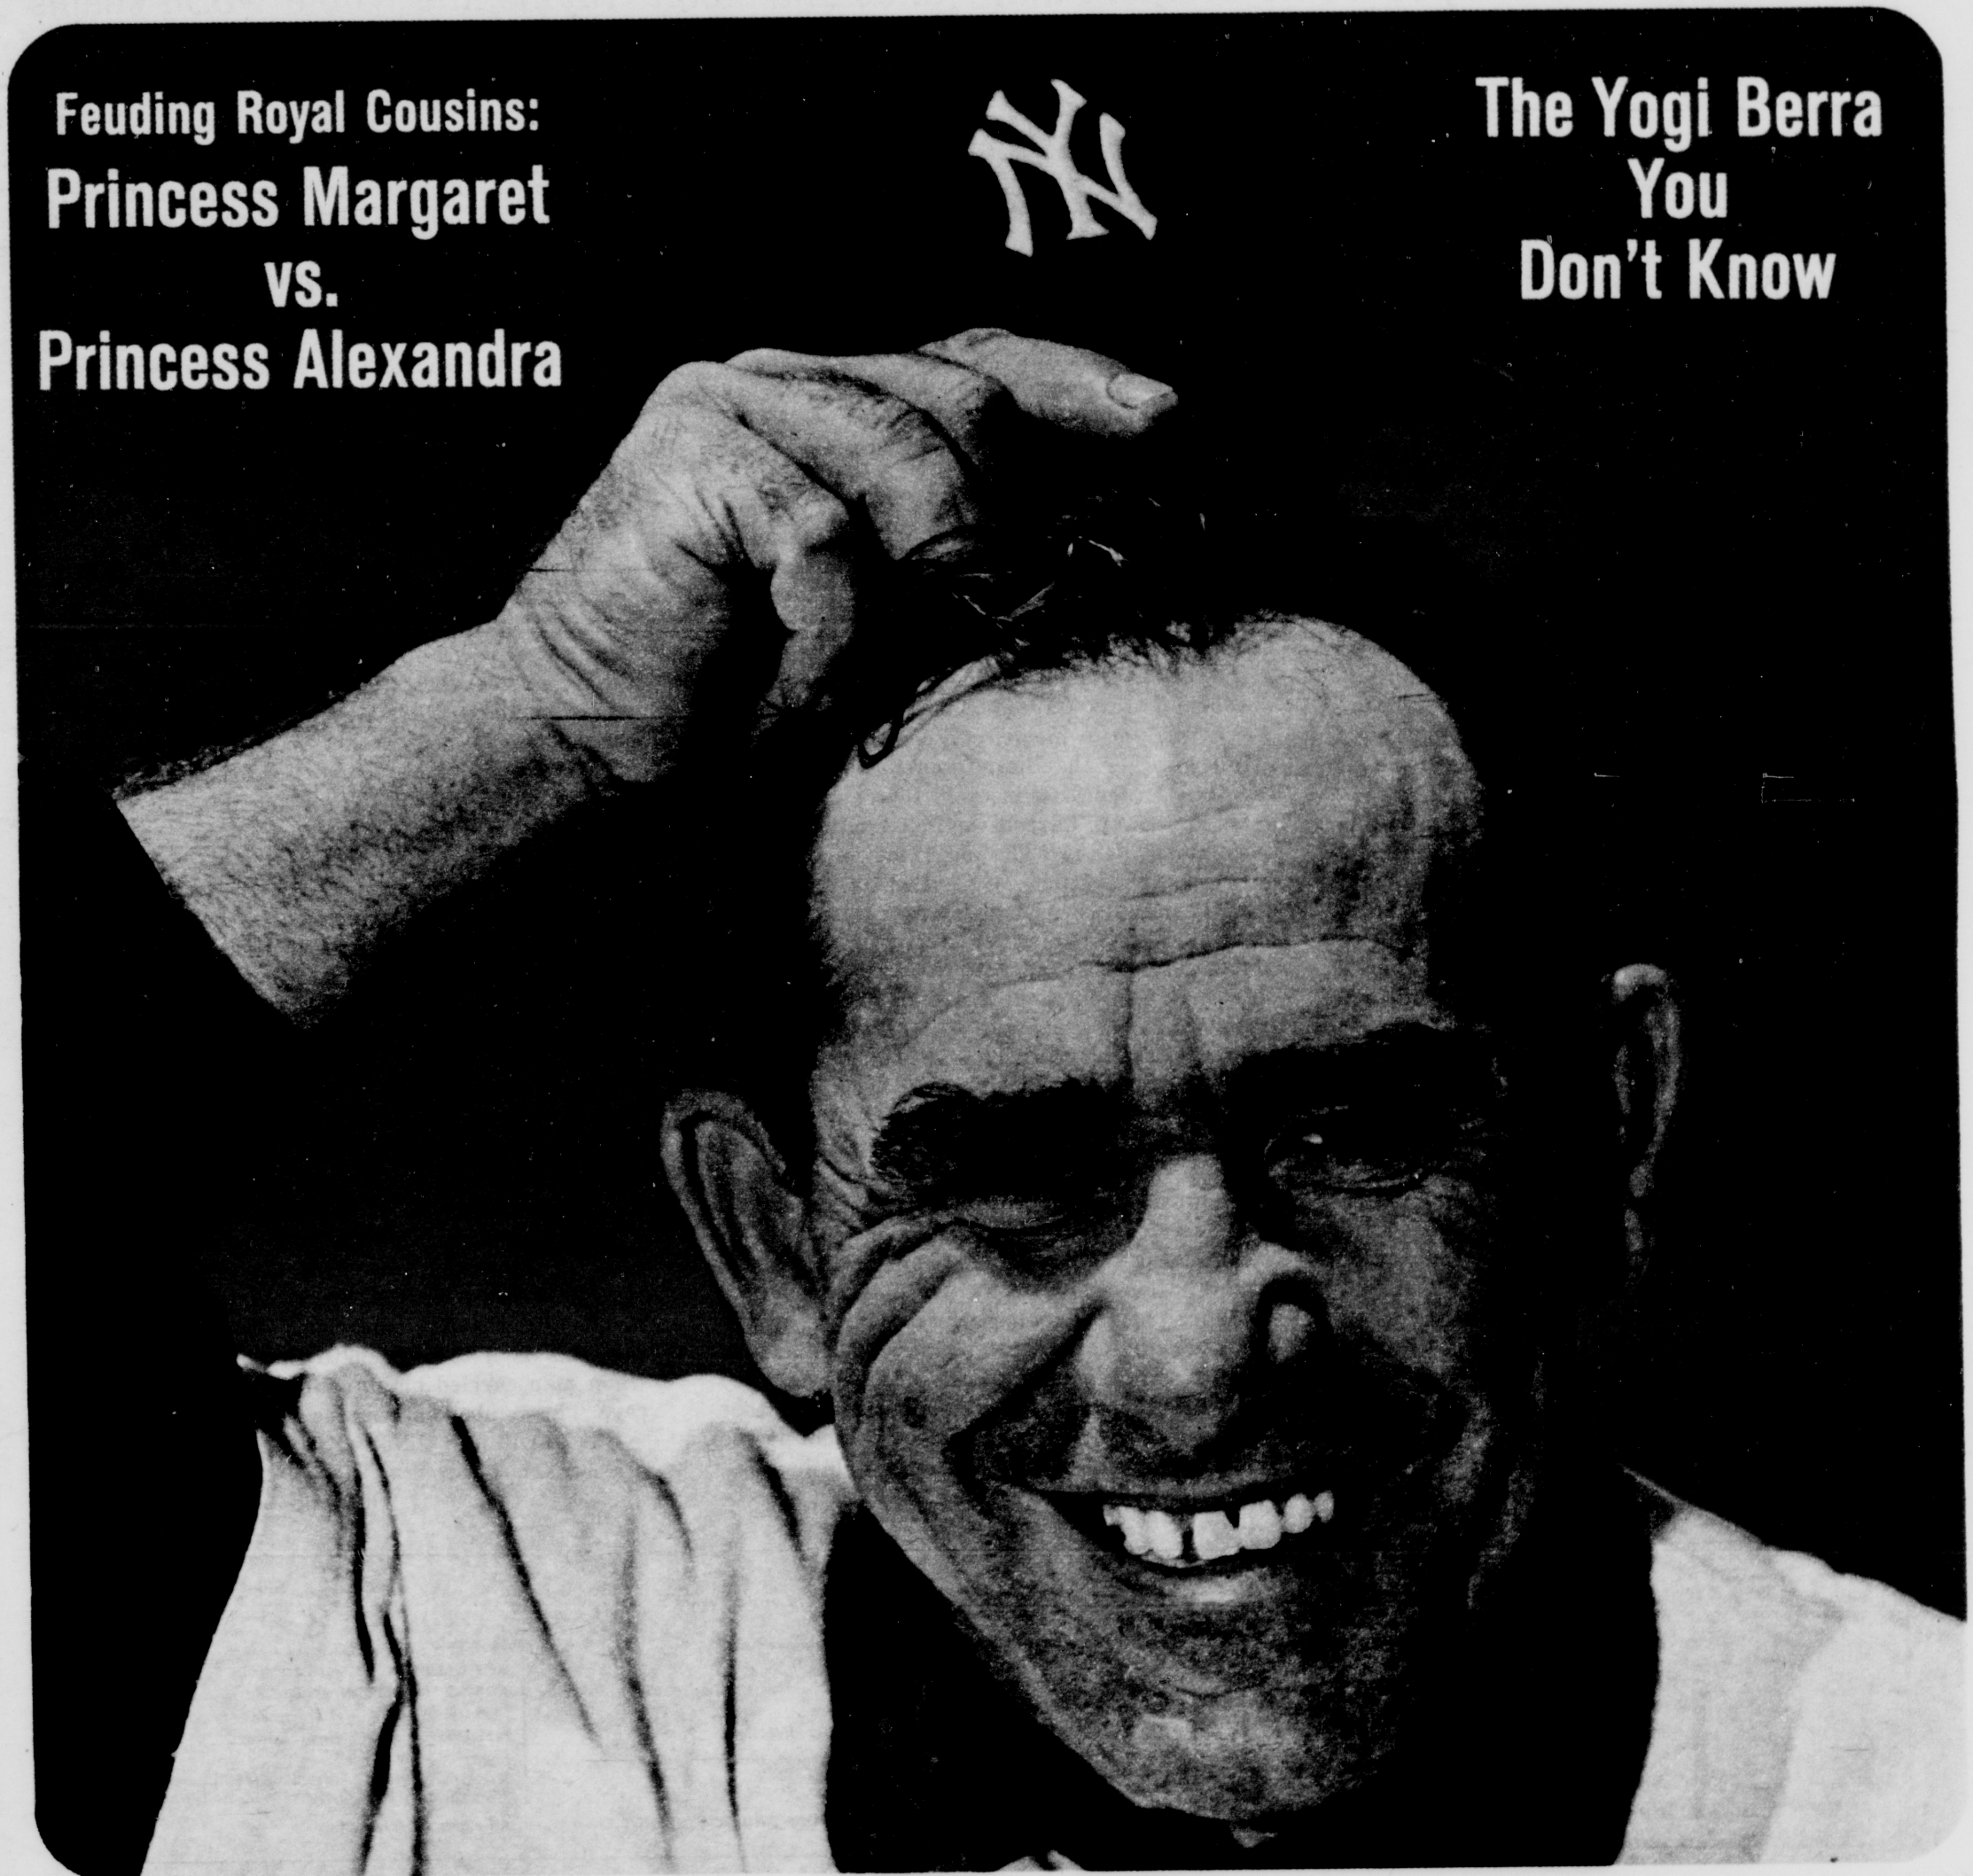
The Yogi Berra You Don't Know



It's the Month of Marriage Madness

Maybe it's no accident that "June" and "loon" rhyme; the whole world seems to react to weddings in the wackiest ways!

By MARYA SAUNDERS

AN ANNUAL MADNESS besets the U.S. this month as 400,000 nervous brides and grooms and legions of apprehensive parents, bridesmaids, and best men are caught up in the strange mixture of ritual, custom, rented tuxedos, and lavish receptions that accompany weddings.

If all this nuptial pandemonium places a strain on American nerves and pocketbooks, there is consolation in the knowledge that things are infinitely worse in other countries. In Bangkok or Calcutta, a wedding in the family is as likely to be a disaster as a blessing. And in Baghdad, parents get a haunted look in their eyes as soon as the youngsters get that gleam in theirs.

Here, according to our far-flung research, are the four basic problems that beset the marriage-minded everywhere—plus the answers some of them have found.

■ How Much Is a Groom Worth? Americans expect a groom to bring only a ring, a best man, and himself to his wedding, while the father of the bride is expected to supply invitations, dinners, receptions, champagne, flowers, orchestras, clothes, linens, silver, china, etc. But all this is nothing compared with the going-over Greek and Indian dads get.

Indian families with a surplus of daughters often teeter close to bankruptcy. Besides staging a spectacular wedding and giving lavish presents of cash and sweetmeats to the bridegroom's family, the bride's father is expected to fork over a huge dowry. Rich families, especially those with homely daughters, find they must even raise the ante with such fringe benefits as an education abroad for the groom.

The final blow often comes during the wedding breakfast when the Indian groom is entitled to ask for one last gift, which must be handed over immediately. Two years ago, an Indian father, who earned $38 a month and had already spent $1,000 on his daughter's dowry, was staggered when his son-in-law asked for a $95 radio as a wedding gift. The distraught father rushed to a moneylender—and is still paying off the loan. He has no hope of buying husbands for his remaining two daughters.

In Greece, dowries are still compulsory and can cost a rich father $25,000 to $100,000. To help the poor, the government has established a free savings plan. Some 120,000 baby girls now have accounts of $33 which, in 20 years, will be worth around $88.

■ How Much Is a Bride Worth? In many lands, however, it's the groom who is saddled with "purchasing" the bride. In Africa, even before a man thinks of marriage, he must consider his cattle resources. If he hasn't enough cows, sheep, or goats to distribute among his girl's relatives, he'll just have to forget her.

When actress Carroll Baker was recently in Africa making a movie, one chieftain took such a fancy to her that he offered to buy her from the director for $750 in cash, 150 cows, plus 200 goats and sheep. Carroll was flattered; the going price for brides is $200 and 12 cows.

Prospective grooms in Central Java were recently confronted with an extraordinary kind of marriage fee. Couples registering for marriage must present 25 dead rats! The ruling was designed to help curb the rat population.

■ How Do You Pick the Day? In some countries, astrologers ply a busy trade scanning the stars for suitable times for weddings. For example, not one marriage was performed for the 372 million Hindus in India in February, 1962, because the end of the world had been predicted for that month. Currently, astrologers believe March, April, May, and June are the only good months for a wedding.

When Hope Cooke, the New York debutante, announced her engagement to the Prince of Sikkim, the court astrologers of his tiny Himalayan kingdom threw up their arms in dismay. "They didn't like the conjunction of my planets," Hope told reporters. "They finally decided that if the Prince and I waited, the heavens would be more propitious." The marriage was postponed a year.

It is widely believed that late spring, especially the month of June, is extremely good for fruitful marriages, since it is the time farmers in many parts of the world have completed planting their most productive crops.

■ How Do You Survive the Wedding? The average American bride throws her bouquet to her bridesmaids. In 14th-century France she would have been jostled and battered by the bridesmaids scuffling for possession of her garter, which was considered good luck and promised immediate marriage to the holder.

Most of the world's marriage customs have placed hardships on women. Typical is a ceremony still prevalent among the Bayankole tribe in the Congo. The groom leads his bride among the assembled guests with a strong rope tied to one of her legs. Sides are chosen by members of the bride's and bridegroom's relatives, and a tug of war takes place. Custom decrees that the groom finally will drag his bride into his arms, slip the rope from her ankle, and hurry home with what is left of her!

Occasionally, the ladies pay their men folk back for such rough treatment. The mother of a bride in the Roro tribe in British New Guinea celebrates her daughter's wedding day by striking wildly with a wooden club at every inanimate object within reach and shouting mock curses on the groom who has "stolen" the girl.

Among Eskimos in the Arctic, there is a tradition that the bride must be carried to her groom's hut kicking, biting, and screaming. Once there, she cheerfully gives up the struggle and takes possession of her new home.

If this sounds familiar, you probably recognize the American custom of the groom carrying the bride over the threshold of their new home. Like the Eskimo bride's biting and kicking, this is a throwback to the primitive days when man carried his unwilling woman into his cave. The symbolism remains today.

But unwilling? Not after all that work the girl has gone through.

BRITAIN'S BATTLE ROYAL:

Princess Margaret vs. Princess Alexandra

Once they were kissing cousins, but now the two young princesses are feuding like a London version of the Hatfields and McCoys

By VERE CONNAUGHT

HALF A MILLION American tourists will be stopping by Buckingham Palace this year. And, almost to a woman, they'll be peeking anxiously between the tall, gilt-tipped railings in hopes of glimpsing one of those cuddly, new royal babies.

What they won't see, however, is the deepening feud between two of the babies' mothers, Princess Margaret and her cousin, Princess Alexandra. As the old wives tell it, family rifts disappear with the first gurgle of a new baby. But when it comes to strong-willed Margaret and stubborn Alexandra, this just hasn't happened.

When 27-year-old Alexandra's first baby (a son) was born Feb. 29, two of the three other expectant royal mothers went to see her. The Duchess of Kent brought gifts for the baby on its first day in the world. Queen Elizabeth came later, looking warmly and happily delighted.

But Princess Margaret, whose second baby was not due for several more weeks, did not visit Alexandra—and the whispers about the royal feud buzzed louder.

How will the feud affect the future roles and fortunes of the two princesses? The signs suggest that one of them may shortly have to take a back seat in palace affairs.

Such spats, of course, are not altogether unknown in the quick-tempered Windsor family. In fact, the present hostilities are related to previous troubles within the palace. A strong undertow of conflict has been present in the family ever since Prince Philip, a near-penniless "Greek interloper," wed Elizabeth.

Though the secret was well kept, Margaret was never in Philip's camp. And, two years ago, Elizabeth was in tears over a family tussle that had driven a further wedge between her husband and her sister Margaret. But today the storm center has shifted from Philip, who is said to be mellowing. It hangs instead over Margaret—as it did in the days when the rebel princess almost upset the family applecart by seeking to wed Peter Townsend, a divorced commoner.

The known facts of her budding rift with Alexandra are these:

When Margaret had her fling with Townsend, Alexandra's mother, Princess Marina, took Philip's side in denouncing the match. Later, when Margaret married photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones, she deliberately left Marina and Alexandra out of the family circle whose opinions she privately sought.

Seeing her mother's rising ire against headstrong Margaret, Alexandra adopted a similar attitude and began to seek Margaret's company less and less. Once the two princesses—seven years apart in age—had been close friends; Alexandra had even nursed a schoolgirl "crush" on her glamorous older cousin. But now she showed irritation whenever Margaret's name was mentioned in her hearing. During a recent visit to Greece, she actually left the room when conversation turned to Margaret's marriage!

Friends say the breach burst wide open when Alexandra refused to be maid of honor at Margaret's wedding on the excuse that she was "too tall." "Margaret never forgave her, or her mother, for that," I was told.

Margaret's pique also has been steadily fanned into anger by Alexandra's growing popularity with the British people. As the younger princess' stock rises, Margaret's tends to fall. "She is no longer the blue-eyed baby at the court," a friend of Elizabeth and Philip told me.

Margaret Suffers by Comparison

Ordinary Britishers compare Margaret's pleasure-seeking life with that of her hard-working and public-spirited cousin—and draw resentful conclusions. When Margaret left her newborn first child, Viscount Linley, to vacation with her handsome husband in the South Seas, British mothers let out a gasp that could be heard across the English Channel. And Margaret's refusal to breast-feed the baby because it would interfere with her way of life came as an additional shock to the maternal-minded British.

Meanwhile, Alexandra, a tall, big-footed, and unaffectedly clumsy girl, was striding through the royal round of chores dropped by Margaret with the chummy success of a Girl Scout leader at a jamboree. Her innocent pleasure at the sight and smell of the baby wards and ship-building yards she visited came as a sunny change after Margaret's sniffy regal manner.

"Princess Alexandra," wrote a court reporter, "lacks the standoffish style common to even the friendliest of royalty. She is much less self-conscious than Margaret was at her age."

It was an opinion held by more and more of Elizabeth's loyal subjects. Sniping criticism began to be heard of Margaret's private living costs, mostly paid for by the British taxpayer. Her yearly fee of $42,000 for "public services" was tartly examined. So, too, was her "grace and favor" apartment in Kensington Palace, which she and her family occupy free of charge.

The British public, smarting over a charge of $225,000 for putting the old place in order before Margaret moved in, demanded to know how much of this sum would be paid for by the Queen. The answer: only a fourth. And Tony and Margaret paid nothing. A grumbling government had to pick up the tab for the balance.

It was growing clear that Margaret was not going to be able to have her royal cake and eat it for much longer. The indulgence of the public for her before her marriage was wearing thin, and court memories sifted the record of her recent activities.

Where Princess Alexandra had been averaging four royal working days a week, Margaret's availability for duty had dropped off alarmingly. She was notably absent at a royal welcome party for the King and Queen of Siam in 1960, though Alexandra was there radiantly welcoming the oriental sovereign pair.

The pattern became increasingly normal. What Margaret had done before, Alexandra now carried on for her. Publicly, Margaret seemed pleased at the respite. In private, a close friend told me she was "madly jealous" of Alexandra eclipsing her position. And then another blow befell her pride: U.S. fashion experts dropped her from their annual list of the world's best-dressed women—and substituted Alexandra!

The Changing Tide of Influence

When Queen Elizabeth's pregnancy was officially announced last year, Margaret was the obvious choice to become regent (a sort of stand-in used by royalty during their absence). But a high official of the court has assured me she would not have been appointed "if Alexandra had not become pregnant herself." (At the time, nobody knew Margaret was pregnant, too.)

This switching tide of influence has widened the breach between the two princesses so that today they are rarely seen together.

From their earliest days, they have followed different roads. Margaret has always been high-strung, artistic, willful, and proud. Alexandra is complacent, enjoys simple pleasures, and dislikes too much intellectual activity. She is not keen on arty people and reads only what she fancies or has to study.

While Margaret was brought up by a mother who loved and pampered her (Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother), Alexandra was deliberately unspoiled. Her mother, Marina, had lost her husband in a wartime air crash and was bitter about the royal family's attitude toward her grief. She wanted her children to stand on their own feet.

When growing up, Alexandra was an awkward girl who was somewhat of an ugly duckling. While Margaret was the darling of the palace, escorted on dates by the cream of the young men in the royal set, the family worried over whether Alexandra would ever marry at all. She didn't seem to care about men any more than she worried over her occasional goofs in public.

Once she accidentally sat on a governor's tall silk hat in a dimly lit Australian church. Her amused comment: "I'm afraid my big bottom did that!" Always the clumsy one of the family, she tripped over her large feet on more than one official occasion.

The danger at present is that the now attractive Alexandra is also putting her large, friendly footprints all over the image left by her cousin Margaret. The royal rivals both know only one of them can win if the feud continues (as seems almost certain).

What each of them stands for is radically different. Margaret wants freedom and power; Alexandra is content to serve. Before long, the Queen will have to decide between them.

Quips and Quotes

The lady visited the doctor's office every week with a new complaint, although in fact she was in fine health. This week her ailment was that she was growing hard of hearing.

"It's so bad," she said, "I can't hear myself cough."

The doctor nodded patiently and filled out a prescription. "Will this improve my hearing?" the lady asked.

"No," the doctor replied, "but it will help you cough louder."

The young couple was proudly showing off their new home to a friend who may have been a little envious. The friend noted that the lot was rather small, the kitchen not very modern, and the bedrooms a little cramped.

"And also," the critical friend said, "the landscaping seems terribly skimpy."

"That's because the young trees are so small," the host replied. "I hope they grow to a good size before you come again."

Balloon-Faced Clown By Dorothy Bundens

Draw a clown face with colored crayon or paints on the bottom side of a paper plate. Curl strips of paper on a scissors blade and paste them on for hair. Add funny ears cut from paper. Now blow up a balloon just large enough to make a big nose. Insert the end through a small hole in the middle of the plate and tie on the reverse side.

Use your clown for a wall decoration or hang him up at an open window and watch his nose wiggle.

CONFESSION—Ask The Man Who Goes There!

Catholics go to Confession to a priest for one reason only: to obtain divine forgiveness for their sins.

But why, you ask, go to a priest? Why not confess our sins directly to God?

Ask the man who goes to confession and here's what he will tell you: Sin is an offense against God; it must be forgiven by God. It is God, not man, Who determines how forgiveness must be obtained. Christ plainly pointed this out when He empowered His Apostles and their successors to forgive sins or to refuse forgiveness.

"Whose sins you shall forgive," Christ said, "they are forgiven them, whose sins you shall retain, they are retained" (John 20:22, 23). Thus Christ authorized the Apostles and their successors to pardon or to deny pardon, as they judge the sinner worthy or unworthy. To do this they had to know what they were forgiving ... the secret dispositions of the sinner ... his sorrow and willingness to repair the wrong done to his neighbor by his sins. Who could make this known but the sinner himself—and what is this but Confession?

But Confession—the Sacrament of Penance—is only one of the seven Sacraments Christ left in His Church. Yes, seven—no more and no less! Christ's religion is not merely a message to be accepted, but a life to be lived—from the cradle to the grave. Christ's seven Sacraments are the answer to man's seven basic needs.

Man is born, but he needs to be reborn a Christian in the Sacrament of Baptism. He is nourished, but he needs Christian nourishment in Holy Communion, the Sacrament of the Eucharist. He grows, but he needs to grow and be strengthened in Christian life by the Sacrament of Confirmation. He is cured of disease, but he needs a remedy for sin, so destructive of Christian life, and this he finds in the Sacrament of Penance.

Man lives in society which needs officials to promote the common good—and for his life in the Church, he finds officials provided by the Sacrament of Orders. He perpetuates the human race in marriage, which Christ made the Sacrament of Matrimony. And at death, he needs consolation and strength for the last dread hour which he finds in the Last Anointing—the Sacrament of Extreme Unction.

We will send you a pamphlet explaining the seven Sacraments ... how they can help you meet the seven basic needs of your life. Nobody will call on you. Write for free Pamphlet No. FM-5.

"Trouble-Shooting" Clinic for the emotionally ill

Here is how one hospital provides around-the-clock emergency help for victims of emotional "accidents"

By HELEN ZOTOS

EARLY ONE spring morning, Mrs. Nancy J. walked into a waiting room at the City Hospital at Elmhurst in New York's borough of Queens.

She was an attractive housewife in her mid-40s but was obviously distressed. "I'd like to see a psychiatrist in the 'Trouble-Shooting Clinic,' " she said.

Within minutes she was led into a quiet room where staff psychiatrist Dr. José Villalon was waiting.

"My husband doesn't love me," Mrs. J. explained. Ever since her son's marriage a few months before, Mrs. J. continued, she had been depressed. For no apparent reason her husband "turned away" from her. She had not only "lost" a son but a husband as well. For 45 minutes Dr. Villalon and Mrs. J. talked as counselor and patient.

Had her husband rejected her? the psychiatrist reflected. Or did Mrs. J. really feel that her son had rejected her by taking a bride? Wasn't her depression a cloak for her real feelings of anger at him? Wasn't she projecting this anger onto her husband? In less than an hour's time, and in only one visit—free of charge and without appointment—Mrs. J. had her vexing problem dealt with by a competent physician. She emerged from his office "a new woman," lifted from the burden of her depression.

Such quick therapy doesn't always occur when an individual seeks help at Elmhurst's remarkable "Trouble-Shooting Clinic." But Dr. Alonzo J. Beavers, the clinic's supervisor, terms it "amazing" how many people can be helped through perplexing emotional difficulties with immediate, short-term professional care.

Since 1958, when the clinic was founded by Dr. Leopold Bellak, the hospital's director of psychiatry, more than 3,000 persons a month have sought aid there.

COUNTLESS HOSPITALS in the United States conduct psychiatric clinics for the emotionally disturbed. Some are free, but usually new patients must wait their turn for consultation. Months may elapse before help finally comes. In contrast, Elmhurst's "Trouble-Shooting Clinic" is geared to offer immediate "emergency" help.

As Dr. Beavers explains it, "Our 'Trouble-Shooting Clinic' has dramatic psychiatric 'emergencies' such as suicide attempts, and most of our visitors have good reasons for coming here. But often, notions of physical illness, legal problems, marital discord, and tensions are unreasonable, relatively superficial, and easily dealt with. One consultation may be all that's necessary. We treat those we can help in one to five sessions and refer along those who need extensive care. In this way we play an active role in preventive as well as therapeutic medicine."

The bulk of Elmhurst's patients are young adults in the 20-to-40 age group. Frustrations in love and marital problems are common afflictions of this age group.

For example, John B. came to the clinic ostensibly because of his drinking. He hadn't the vaguest notion why he was drinking. Consultation revealed that he had been engaged for five years and always felt deeply anxious in his fiancée's company. He did not realize that his anxiety disguised feelings of anger at being taken for granted by her and that he had turned to drinking to escape his rage. During only three sessions, he was made aware of the real problem and how he might cope with it.

Since the clinic's founding, many hospitals across the nation have become interested in setting up their own facilities to meet walk-in "psychiatric emergencies."

"One would hope," Dr. Bellak says, "that every general hospital will eventually establish a 'trouble-shooting' clinic similar to their medical-surgical emergency clinics.

"Every city, with its 'lonely crowd,' needs some place where people can take their minor worries as well as their major emergencies at any time of the day or night."

Now that so much attention is being given to mental illness, this is a promising development. The public, as well as hospitals, must see that it is translated into fact.

WHERE COURAGE BEGINS

This famous war correspondent learned fear from a terrible wound —and bravery from the example of a gallant young captain

By RICHARD TREGASKIS

Author of "Vietnam Diary," "Guadalcanal Diary," "Invasion Diary," and "Stronger than Fear"

IT WAS AMONG the ruins of Aachen that I met Ozell Smoot, the lean, dark captain who taught me how to grapple with fear and discover courage, military style—or for that matter, any style.

Aachen in the late fall of 1944 was full of the shocks, sounds, and dangers of an embattled city. But its ruination was not yet complete.

Determined German soldiers and Americans of the famous First Division were further reducing it to rubble. Block by block, street by street, room by room, we were battling to drive them out of this, the first sizable German city we had reached since D-Day—and they were resisting bitterly.

I was involved as a correspondent in this clash of armies, writing about the thousands of human beings killed and wounded there. And, if there was any lesson to be learned, it seemed to be that any spot could suddenly become bloody and mortal.

I was much aware of this when I met Ozell, a lanky, rawhide son of the Deep South who commanded the company which I was attached to. Ozell had an extra-slow drawl and a good company-commander manner: he was thoughtful enough but decisive; tall enough so you could see him; neat enough but not too neat. If the GIs of C Company, 26th Infantry, First Division, had prepared a list of physical requirements for their commander, they probably couldn't have found a better-looking C.O. than Ozell.

This was all I knew about him at the beginning. I didn't find out till later that I couldn't have found a better man to help me solve the pressing psychological problem which I was facing.

After a year of the Pacific War, I had gone to Sicily and then from Salerno up to San Pietro in the Italian campaign. I had seen a lot of our people killed and hurt, usually much too close. At last, on the mountain approaches to San Pietro, I was hit by a German mortar. They carried me out with a hole in my skull the size of a soup spoon and bone and steel fragments embedded two inches deep in my brain.

I worked my way toward the States through six Army and Navy hospitals. Finally, a tantalum plate was put into my head at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington—and I went back to the fighting front.

I caught up with our forces in Normandy and went along with them through a good many actions. But I knew I was not the same as I had been. I was aware of a new and dreadful sensitivity to the dangers of war—an acute, nervous state that made the sounds of incoming shells or enemy machine-gun fire crushing and unbearable.

I had a succession of bad "nerve shakes" across France, Belgium, Holland, and into Germany. So I decided to put the whole business to the acid test by plunging into the Aachen battle with a front-line company; I knew that if I survived I would have a new set of nerves—and probably a good story, too.

But now, as I joined up with Ozell Smoot's company in Aachen, I was kicking myself for having made what was very evidently the wrong decision. As I walked cautiously through the rubble-streaked streets, heading for the Second Squad, First Platoon, with whom I would be staying, I already felt waves of terrible apprehension—an awareness that the worst could happen to me, that I would be the statistic in the casualty list and not someone else.

I know that for every death in battle there were always four or five terrible injuries. And, thanks to my previous wound, I had a good idea what wounds meant: long sessions of jolting pain, desperate abandonment of hope, the horrible hours of not knowing whether you would ever recover, the contemplation of ways to kill yourself if you became no more than a vegetable.

The second squad was hunkered down for the night in a cellar which had served as an air-raid shelter in roofless Aachen. Checking with the corporal who led the squad, I learned that the 11-man unit had lost three men in the last few days.

WE SPREAD OUT on the cellar floor to wait out the night. It was calm. The only real alarm was the rattling of a German tank a couple of blocks away and a few bursts of artillery shells. One shell hit into our block, and there was a terrible waterfall of smashing glass upstairs in our building. I was sure we were going to get it.

But war ran to its usual form: anticlimax piled on expected catastrophe. No more close hits, no German counterattack that night.

In the morning things really turned bad. After getting orders to clear the blocks ahead of us and reach a new phase line, we dragged ourselves out of the cellar and deployed along the street. Behind us, the 90-mm tank destroyers began a nerve-shattering barrage designed to clear the way for our attack.

The haughty coughing of the 90s, the choirlike sigh of the outgoing shells, the shattering impact of the rounds beyond us and the shaking of the earth as they hit—these were the usual sounds before an attack, yet already my nerves were at the breaking point!

The attack that day and the days after was a blur of terror, a living nightmare: running down streets; faces full of dirt as shells screamed in and you hit the rubble which was the earth; the shock of the cracking bullets that were coming too close (close ones don't whine as they do on tv—if they're dangerous, they crack); the knowing that an unseen enemy rifleman or machine gunner is trying to kill you; the breathless hunt for him among the ruins; the silencing of him, usually with grenades or artillery; the horror on men's faces at the moment you know well—when you have been hit; and the dreadful ignorance of whether or not you are going to die.

This was what it was like for me in the fiery crux of that front line. And it would have been unbearable and maddening except for one thing: the frequent appearance of Ozell.

When things were worst, we always saw Ozell. Darting into our street while the firing was still going on all around, he would stop to talk to the platoon leader as calmly as if we were on maneuvers. He would make sure the wounded were carried out and reached ambulances. And he would spot snipers and Kraut artillery and observation posts with a cool eye and call artillery or mortars down on them.

I was always astounded by his coolness and his effectiveness. He never seemed concerned that he would be killed or wounded. He was just what a company commander should be: a prime mover, a leader, an example of courage.

Then came the moment when I was most nearly distraught. Sprawled in the broken shell of a house, alone as you usually are at the front, I heard the ripping sounds of a German machine gun in the next street. The firing grew heavier; it was a couple of Kraut "paper cutters" close together. Then there was a heavy fusillade of small arms which came like a cascade. It seemed closer; it seemed to be moving in my direction. Then it stopped for a moment —and in that moment Ozell came skidding into the broken bricks which formed my hole.

He grinned at me. "A rough day," he said. As usual, I admired his calm —but also a streak of something like jealousy hit me. He wouldn't be so calm if he had once been wounded, as I had! In that moment, he seemed to read my face, or perhaps he had heard from some members of the platoon that I had been running much too scared.

He said quietly, as if he understood my mood completely:

"I got it myself a couple of times. I came in with the Division in North Africa." Ozell must have heard about my being wounded, and he knew exactly how to get to me.

In a lull between spurts of firing, he went on: "It took me a while to figure it. Your chances aren't any worse after you've been hit once. It just seems like it. It takes more guts because you know what can happen."

He didn't look right at me when he was talking, and in a second he was gone, running down the street toward the corner.

The truth of what he said didn't hit me immediately. It actually was months before I had redefined it in my own terms. Yet by the special magic that he commanded as a leader, what he said somehow made me feel more at ease. He wanted me to know that he had long since come to grips with the same problem I faced then.

What he was saying was: when you first go into a war (or anything else mortally dangerous), you think it can never happen to you. It might happen to someone else but not to you—until, unbelievably, it does happen. Then comes the real beginning of courage: when you go on taking chances despite the fact that now you know the realities you couldn't imagine at first. Suddenly, you are a battle-qualified veteran with a new, seasoned kind of courage. Like Ozell's.

After that moment in Aachen, the fighting suddenly seemed less dreadful, and I knew I had gained a new grip on myself. Ozell had restored to me the toughness I needed, a new kind of toughness, the seasoned kind of inner strength that comes after battle scars.

Ozell came through the battle of Aachen unharmed. He kept his company together, he rode his platoons, he led his men, he got the result: at the end of a harrowing week, we had taken our casualties and had pushed the Krauts out of Aachen.

When the battle was over and I was lucky enough to have a rest in the States before going out to the Pacific again with a B-29 crew, I had time to think about Ozell and what he had meant to me.

A fever of wanting to write about the fighting in Aachen seized me, and in a couple of months of frenzied work I wrote a novel about it called Stronger than Fear. It was about an imaginary captain named Paul Kreider—not too unlike Ozell Smoot—who fought a battle with fear in a city like Aachen. I called the city Unterbach.

The writing of the book was a hard struggle, but when it was over, I felt I had distilled a central truth of life at war, and perhaps even of life in general. This truth was that when you are faced with a mortal fear which demands the deepest kind of courage, and you can find that courage, you have won life's most important battle, the battle for self-respect.

But this story isn't complete without mention of what happened to Ozell. I lost touch with him when I left Aachen and the First Division, and it was not till after the war was over that I learned his fate.

He had been killed about a month after I left him, in the tough winter fighting among the tall pines of the Hürtgen Forest. He died a soldier's death, leading his troops in battle, taking the chances he had to with his usual calm competence. He died facing the ultimate danger, respected and loved by his men.

I would hope to die as well. But however that may be, I will always be grateful to him for showing me how to face life with the strength that comes when you realize the magnitude of the dangers — and nevertheless tackle them head-on.

As I crouched there fearing "the bullet that had my name on it," Ozell spoke quietly, reassuringly.

The Yogi Berra You

Behind that comic countenance and easygoing manner lies a keen and ambitious taskmaster—as the Yankees are now learning

By ED FITZGERALD

Author of "You Can't Beat the Hours" (with Mel Allen) and "Yogi" (with Yogi Berra)

IN VENERABLE Yankee Stadium there is a green leather swivel chair which has been molded into comfortable shape by such illustrious baseball managers as Casey Stengel and Ralph Houk.

A few weeks ago reporters cornered a rookie manager named Yogi Berra and asked him whether he had tried out the boss's favorite chair.

"Naw," said Yogi, rather embarrassed. "Haven't had the time—just been walking around it." But Yogi is too honest for even a little dissembling, and he soon was correcting himself. "Well, I sat in it once to try it."

"How did it feel?"

"A little low," Yogi replied. "Do those things swing up?"

It was a symbolic question. Millions of baseball fans wonder how Yogi will get along in the most eminent throne in the game. I collaborated with Yogi on his autobiography, and I know most of the players and coaches who now work for him. Strange, but few seriously considered the question of Yogi as a manager until this year. Among the exceptions—Mrs. Lawrence Berra.

BACK IN THE WINTER of 1962, when Yogi was happy about signing a two-year contract with the Yankees as a catcher-outfielder-pinch hitter for approximately $52,000, he told some of his close friends that the ball club had sweetened the contract with the understanding that he could, when through as a player, coach for the Yankees.

Yogi was smart enough to understand that his side-line activities, such as vice president and part owner of a soft-drink company and his co-ownership with Phil Rizzuto of a $400,000 bowling alley in Montclair, N.J., would benefit from a continuing relationship with the club.

His wife Carmen, though, saw no reason why Yogi shouldn't be more than a coach. She knew how much money coaches made, and she knew how much money managers made. She also knew that Yogi needed to be pushed, and she pushed him—gently but firmly. "Why," she asked, "should you settle for a job as coach when you could be manager?"

Paul Richards, one of the most respected of all the professional managers, pushed the point further when he volunteered a quote for Yogi's autobiography: "He'd make a fine manager, and why not? He's deadly serious even though he gives the impression of kidding around behind the plate. He's smart . . . Why can't a fellow like him manage?"

Around the same time, the Yankees began to think about it, too. Owners Dan Topping and Del Webb were aware of the Berras' thinking at the end of 1961. They didn't take it seriously, though, even when it was rumored that several other big-league clubs were interested in Yogi as a manager.

It wasn't until the brand-new Mets, playing at the old Polo Grounds under the managership of the greatest public-relations man of them all, Casey Stengel, began to cut sharply into the Yankees' attendance that the ultraconservative Yankee management took a long second look at the picture of Yogi Berra, manager. All of a sudden it seemed to be a pretty smart idea, and at the end of the 1963 season, they promoted the able (three pennants in three seasons) but not especially newsworthy Ralph Houk to the front office as general manager and installed Yogi in the dugout.

"Can you do it, Yogi?" some of his oldest friends asked him point-blank. They weren't worried about Yogi's ability to call plays, to handle pitchers, or to pick pinch hitters. They realized that Yogi knew as much baseball as any man in the game. What did worry them was what would happen when Yogi had to read the riot act to a confirmed rule breaker, when he had to tell a hard-working rookie that he was being sent down to the minors or a popular old veteran that he was being released.

The truth is, as Yogi wasted no time proving by the firm way he took charge of the Yankees' spring training camp, the real Yogi Berra is miles away from the amiable, inarticulate muscle man he has been made to appear.

YOGI LIKES to get along with people, and he likes to be liked in return—but he doesn't let anybody take advantage of him. Pete Sheehy, the Yankees' senior clubhouse man, still remembers Yogi returning the beat-up uniform cap handed him when he first came up to the Yankees late in 1946.

"Give me a new one," Yogi said gruffly. "I'm a player on this club."

George Weiss, who used to be the general manager of the Yankees and now operates in that capacity for the Mets, will never forget the bitter salary duels Yogi waged with him in the years when he was pushing his pay up from the $15,000 to the $50,000 level (where it remains despite Yankee propaganda about starting him off as manager at the same $35,000 Houk was paid in his first year). Once, at the end of a fruitless discussion that found them still more than $10,000 apart, Yogi put Weiss, who was responsible only to club president Dan Topping, in his place by saying, "I'm tired of talking to you about it. Get me your boss." There wasn't then, and there isn't now, any Casper Milquetoast in Lawrence Peter Berra.

It was typical of Berra that he didn't flinch from openly facing the whispered charges that the Yankees had felt it was safe to put him in the manager's office because they knew that Houk was not far away, and that it was Houk who would keep the ballplayers in line and who would actually be in charge.

"Roy Hamey (Houk's predecessor as general manager) never came into the clubhouse when Ralph was managing," Yogi said, "and I'm sure Ralph won't come into my clubhouse. Hamey didn't tell Ralph what to do on the ball field, and Ralph won't tell me." He summed it all up by saying, with unmistakable aggressiveness, "I know a lot of people are going to keep on saying that Ralph's running this ball club. But that's a lot of baloney. I am."

THERE IS much misconception in the public image of Yogi Berra. Because Yogi loved his mother and father and frequently went back to St. Louis to visit them, some ultrasophisticates labeled him a "mama's boy."

But Yogi left home to earn his own living when he was only 17, and it wasn't very long after that that he was taking care of his parents, as he did for the rest of their lives.

He is equally unabashed in confessing his complete adoration of his beautiful blonde wife, and that makes some cynics put him down as a henpecked husband unable to boss his own family, much less the New York Yankees, from Mickey Mantle to Phil Linz. But anyone who has ever seen Yogi and Carm (as he calls her) together, either at home or on an evening out, knows how quick she is to defer to him. If she did nudge him into reaching for a bigger job than the one he first had in mind—well, how many men before him owed part of their success to a similar vote of confidence from their wives?

A few hours after his appointment, Yogi made an appearance at a baseball luncheon. Asked to say a few words, he approached the microphone, seized it firmly, and asked, "What's new?"

What's new is that the Yankees have a new manager who was hired not only to win the pennant but to bring the fans back to Yankee Stadium and to keep them happy. The real Yogi Berra, not the imaginary one, is the best man in the world for the job.
